Soviet Blocks Revolt Terror, Calls Trotzky Plot's Author

Stalin's Death Planned, Moscow Says; Arrests 16 for Open Trial.

Zinoviev, Kamenev, Now Jailed, Named

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

Moscow, Aug. 14.—A terrorist plot aimed at the overthrow of the Moscow regime was exposed by the Soviet Russian government tonight.

The NKVD — People's Commissariat for Internal Affairs—announced officially that Leon Trotzky, now an exile in Norway, ordered the plot against Communist Party leaders and the Soviet government.

A reign of terror, including assassinations, was prevented by the exposure. Sixteen persons were ordered arrested and tried on charges of plotting revolution.

Those charged with planning the revolt under Trotzky's orders included Gregory Zinoviev and Leo Kamenev, veteran bolsheviks who were loyal followers of Trotzky, even when he and the late Nicolai Lenin founded the Soviet state.

The plot allegedly provided for assassination of Josef Stalin, present Soviet dictator—the "man of steel."

Zinoviev Already Jailed.

Zinoviev and Kamenev already are in prison, serving ten years for plotting counter-revolutionary movements, including the death of Stalin.

Rumors of the plot exposed officially today have been current for several days. Conspicuous activity by the NKVD and a tightening of drastic restrictions against the use of firearms portended the expose.

Zinoviev and Kamenev, once high in the councils of the Communist Party, were tried in absolute secrecy on counter-revolutionary charges in January, 1935.

Until then Zinoviev had been one of the stormiest figures on the Russian scene after the overthrow of the imperial dynasty, in which he played a leading role. He was a member of an upper class Russian family and had been destined for a professional career. He became a Communist in the early years of this century.

Spanish Aid Reported.

Trotzky, arch-enemy of Stalin and long an exile from Russia, has figured in the news during the past few weeks, but not as a plotter against the Moscow government. From his refuge in Norway he was accused in the European press of having played a prominent part in guiding the Madrid Popular Front government in its fight against Fascist-Monarchist insurrectionists.

Kamenev joined the Marxist movement more than 40 years ago. He rose to high position in the Communist Party under the Lenin regime, but joined the Trotzky opposition in 1926. He was expelled from the party in 1927. Readmitted in 1929 he was again expelled in 1932.

Kamenev and Zinoviev were imprisoned following the assassination of Sergei Kirov, close friend of Stalin and prominent member of the Soviet political bureau.

The official announcement said the plot was formed under direct orders from Trotzky "and the united center of the Trotzky-Zinoviev bloc formed in 1932."

The bloc allegedly consists of Trotzky, Zinoviev, Kamenev, Evdokimov, Bakaev and Smirnov. All but Trotzky are in prison, but will be tried again with sentence to death hanging over their heads.

To carry out the plot, the NKVD alleged, Trotzky personally sent several terrorists to Moscow from foreign countries.

Oslo, Norway, Aug. 14 (U.P.).—The chief of the Oslo detective department, Reidar Sveen, today proceeded to Kristiansand to interview Leon Trotzky, exiled Russian leader, who was charged in Moscow with fomenting a terrorist plot against the Communist Party and Soviet government.

The detective chief went to see Trotzky after interviewing Minister of Justice Trygve Lie.

Sveen's departure followed allegations by the Nazi newspaper Frittfolk that while in Norway Trotzky had written several articles for Russian periodicals printed in Paris.

Hoover Appeals For Aid Against White Slavers

FBI Reports Decrease in Crime Wave During Two-Year Period.

Having established an outstanding record in stamping out kidnaping, racketeering, robbery and murder, J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, yesterday revealed that crime was decreasing throughout the Nation, and asked "public spirited citizens" to assist in stamping out the white slave traffic by acting as informers.

"Public spirited citizens can be of invaluable assistance in cooperating with the F. B. I. in its effort to stamp out the interstate traffic in women by reporting to the nearest field office of the F. B. I., or directly to Washington headquarters, information coming to their attention showing specific instances of women being transported between States for immoral purposes," Hoover said.

In connection with his appeal, he made public two reports, compiled from police departments of 1,127 cities, which showed that all types of crime except rape were less frequent in 1935 than in 1934.

The cities whose crime records were compiled in the report have a total population of 43,920,738—about a third of the population of the entire country.

The greatest decreases were in robberies and automobile theft classifications. The number of robberies dropped from 48,899 in 1933 to 43,747 in 1935, a decrease of 26.5 per cent. Automobile thefts decreased by about the same percentage, the figures showing a daily average of 362 stolen cars in 1933 and of only 268.1 per day in 1935.

Murder is also on the decline in these cities. In 1933, there were 3,131 murders reported. In 1935, there were 2,704, a decrease of 13.6 per cent. Cases of burglary and of aggravated assault also showed a decrease, but the number of rape cases climbed 15.6 per cent.

1,500,000 Annually.

Despite the general decline, however, Hoover estimates that approximately 1,500,000 serious crimes are committed in the United States every year.

"This indicates," the report says, "the tremendous volume of crime still existent in this country and the urgent necessity for active cooperation of law-abiding citizens with the law enforcement agencies, so that a further reduction may be obtained."

Means Tells Wife Of 'Ill-Treatment' At Federal Prison

Gaston B. Means, convicted of swindling Mrs. Edward B. McLean of $104,000 on a promise to return the kidnaped Lindbergh baby, doesn't think they are treating him right in Leavenworth Penitentiary.

Yesterday he complained to his wife, Mrs. Julie Means, that he had been confined in the "punishment ward" of Leavenworth for nearly a year before he was stricken with an intestinal infection. In that time, he said, he was given only an hour a day for exercise.

Means' story about the "punishment ward" was news to those at the Federal Bureau of Prisons here.

"He hasn't been given any special punishment that I knew of," said Sanford Bates, director of Federal prisons. "I assume he was referring to the C cell block, where we have kept him and other long-term prisoners.

"He is not given the run of the prison yard, but then neither are the other long-term prisoners in his cell block."

Showers to Bring Heat Relief Today

Cooling showers today are expected to bring Washington relief from heat that caused a prostration yesterday in nearby Maryland.

Ernest Cooper, 43, of Baltimore, was treated at Casualty Hospital after he collapsed at Beltsville, Md. Hospital attaches said Cooper was working on the Greenbelt resettlement project.

Yesterday's high was 93, at 3 p. m.; Thursday's was 94.

Weather Bureau officials said they do not expect widespread rainfall today, nor do they anticipate a radical change in temperature. Showers will, however, lower the temperature by 8 or 10 degrees, it was announced.

National Social Justice Union Split Over Lemke Indorsement

Resolution, Offered by New York Delegation, Would Confine Such Action to Congressional Candidates; Coughlin for Union Party Man.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 14.—With a resolution against indorsement of any Presidential candidate, a New York delegation late today threw the first contest into the wildly demonstrative convention of the Coughlin-founded National Union for Social Justice.

The resolution crystalized opposition to proposed indorsement of Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota, the Union Party's candidate for President, but it did not name Lemke.

It was offered by the delegation from the Twenty-fifth New York Congressional District after a day of tumultuous cheering, first for Father Coughlin, then for the youthful Senator Rush D. Holt (Democrat), West Virginia, the convention keynoter.

The radio priest, who has announced his support of Lemke, said he expected introduction of a counter resolution seeking to have the convention indorse Lemke's candidacy. He emphasized he would not seek to influence the action of the convention on the question of indorsement.

The resolution against indorsement, prepared by Gordon M. Wagner, chairman of the New York district's delegation, would confine any indorsement to Congressional candidates approved by the National Union.

At a press conference tonight, Father Coughlin said he believed the resolution opposing indorsement of Lemke would be "met 80 to 1."

"It is my opinion," he said, "that Mr. Lemke will be indorsed."

He said there was no possibility

Unfavorable Result Would Break 43-Year Record if Trend Proceeds.

By Robert C. Albright.

Rising importations from abroad, which in the first first six months of this year gave the United States the first half-year unfavorable trade balance in ten years, roused speculation here yesterday on an adverse foreign trade trend that officials said would break a 43-year record if continued through 1936.

Not since 1926 have general imports into this country for a six-month period exceeded exports, an analysis of Commerce Department statistics disclosed. Unless imports drop below exports in the remaining five months, the United States will show the first unfavorable year's trade balance since 1893, when the scales were adverse by $18,736,000, it was said.

The development was emphasized by drought inroads on important food crops, and rising domestic prices, which may make it necessary for America to go to the world for its foodstuffs in increasing volume. Increasing United States dependence on foreign food products was noted in 1934, as one direct result of the 1934 drought.

More Wheat Imported.

A Commerce Department compilation, "Trend of United States Foreign Trade," disclosed yesterday that already in 1936 the United States has imported 63 per cent more wheat than it did in the comparable period of 1935.

According to the same publication, imports of manufactured foodstuffs, including meat products, sugar and other processed foods, averaged 18 per cent higher in the Operation Plot Is Told to Court By Ann Hewitt

Heiress Testifies She Was Tricked by Doctors in Examination.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Aug. 14.—Ann Cooper Hewitt, taking the witness stand in a surprise move against two physicians accused of mayhem conspiracy, testified today she was tricked into submitting to the operation by which she was sterilized.

The 22-year-old heiress suffered three paroxysms of coughing, however, and the sensational case was recessed for the week-end in the midst of a defense attempt to show she was being "used" in a plot against the large estate of her late father, Peter Cooper Hewitt.

Attorneys explained she was just recovering from whooping cough.

Tells of Examination.

Miss Hewitt testified Dr. Boyd and his co-defendant, Dr. Tilton E. Tillman, examined her, but did not take her pulse count or temperature, did not touch her and prescribed no medicine.

Nevertheless, she said, a nurse examined her and she was taken to a hospital, ostensibly for an appendectomy.

The operation was performed in August, 1934, while Miss Hewitt was still a minor. After reaching her majority she filed a $500,000 suit against her mother, Mrs. Maryon Cooper Hewitt, the two physicians and a woman psychiatrist. She charged her mother engineered a plot to gain control of her inheritance, estimated as high as $10,000,000.

Actresses Who Lost Their Jobs Accuse WPA Dramatic Aid

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 14.—Three former WPA actresses accused drama project officials of discharging them because they refused to entertain "Federal men" at a stag party at which they were ordered to model clothes.

Four men, joining in a general complaint to WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, complained of discriminatory treatment in being dropped from the drama project rolls.

All seven sought the ouster of Leonard L. Gallagher, appointed five months after the alleged irregularities and discrimination occurred. Gallagher replied that the complaining actors and actresses were among those dropped from the rolls when a Federal order required a cut in quotas.

They had been discharged, he said, because they were unable to prove before a hearing that they had any standing as professionals in the theater.

Gallagher admitted the charge of one girl actress, who reported several months ago of being annoyed by the advances of a minor official, had been substantiated and the official dismissed.

The charges of the seven were relayed to Administrator Hopkins by Attorney Harry Lewin, who claimed a hearing had been denied in the matter by a State supervisor, and requested an investigation.

One of the three women, Miss Ruth Colby, related the tale of being forced to appear at a hotel stag party, and asked to stay and "entertain" the men.

When she reported at the hotel, ostensibly to participate in a "style show," she said she found "the room littered with bottles of liquor, and several of the men very drunk."

The men told her, she declared, they were members of the "Federal Survey Board" from Washington.

Washington officials of the drama division said they had had no communication with Lewin, reported on his way to the Capital to present the protests of the dismissed actresses.

Peace Appeal By Roosevelt Warns World

Declares United States Will Defend Self and 'Neighborhood.'

Text of President's Address—Page 7.

By the Associated Press.

Chautauqua, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Expressing "deep concern" about tendencies abroad, President Roosevelt tonight spoke out for world peace, but at the same time warned that this country could and would defend itself and "defend our neighborhood."

"I hate war," said the President in close-clipped phrase in a foreign affairs speech urging a building of public opinion for neutrality "if war should break out again in another continent." Some, he said, would seek to evade neutrality to gain riches.

"If we face the choice of profits or peace," he said, "the Nation will answer—must answer—'we choose peace.'"

The Chief Executive spoke from the raised platform of a wooden amphitheater sunk into a tree-studded hillside near the shores of Lake Chautauqua. Following the address he departed for Binghampton, N. Y., to resume his flood area tour.

Apprehensive Over Europe.

After describing at length the friendly relations of the nations of North and South America, Mr. Roosevelt expressed apprehension over conditions abroad. He spoke particularly of the "bitter experience" of witnessing the violation of both the spirit and letter of international agreements "without regard to the simple principles of honor."

"Our closest neighbors are good neighbors," the President said. "If there are remoter nations that wish us not good, but ill, they know that we are strong; they know that we can and will defend ourself and defend our neighborhood."

He did not define the term "neighborhood," nor did he expand upon what might be implied in his assertion that it would be defended.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had seen war on land and sea.

"I have seen blood running from the wounded," he said. "I have seen men coughing out their gassed lungs. I have seen the dead in the mud. I have seen cities destroyed.

Saw Horrors of War.

"I have seen 200 limping, exhausted men come out of line—the survivors of a regiment of 1,000 that went forward 48 hours before. I have seen children starving. I have seen the agonies of mothers and wives.

"I hate war!"

The President said "it is our hope that knowledge of the practical application of the good neighbor policy in this hemisphere will be borne home to our neighbors across the seas.

"For ourselves, we are on good terms with them—terms in most cases of straightforward friendship, of peaceful understanding.

"But of necessity, we are deeply concerned about tendencies of recent years among many of the nations of other continents. It is a bitter experience to us when the spirit of agreements to which we are a party is not lived up to."

Mr. Roosevelt repeated a "hands-off" policy for other countries and urged America, if it ever faces a choice, to select peace instead of war profits.

Not once did the President men-

Aid for Americans In Palestine Terror Is Asked by Consul

Jerusalem, Aug. 14 (Jewish Telegraph Agency) (A.P.).—Consuls of the United States and Polish governments made representations to the Palestine government today regarding safety of their nationals in the City of Safed.

The action followed upon appeals to their respective consulates by 92 American citizens and a number of Polish citizens for protection against Arab terrorists.

The foreigners telegraphed for aid from Safed, where a thrown bomb last night wiped out a family of four Jews.

Rabbi Alter Unger and two of his children were killed in the blast. A third child died today.

The Palestine government was accused of negligence in protection of Jews from Arab violence in funeral orations today for Rabbi Unger and his children.

Rabbi Gedelia Silverstone, of Washington, D. C., joined a local rabbi in the funeral rites which brought out most of the Jewish community.

A strong police guard was posted between the Jewish and Arab quarters to prevent any new outbreak.

Germans Ordered Freed After Nazis Protest to Slayings.

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 15 (Saturday) (A.P.).—Portuguese troops patroling the Spanish frontier fired on a group of loyal Spanish militiamen who, the Portuguese said, were attempting to cross the border, it was announced early today.

The incident occurred near Campo Maior, Portugal, a town northwest of Badajoz, Spain, it was stated.

The announcement followed on the Portuguese government's dispatch of instructions to its Madrid charge d'affaires to protest to the Spanish government against an alleged violation of Portuguese territory by loyal Spanish troops Thursday in the same region.

By the Associated Press.

Lisbon, Portugal, Aug. 14.—Mass slayings of prisoners and slaughter by incendiary airplane bombs were stories of horror told tonight by refugees from Spain.

The correspondent of Diario Noticias reported from Rosal de la Fronteira that rebel forces entered the town of Almendralejo, in Badajoz Province, and slew more than 1,000 militia men, including about 100 women, who supported the Madrid government.

The city of Badajoz, held by government fighters, was said to be in flames, but still resisting the rebel attack.

Refugees, pouring across the border into Portugal by the thousands, said 19 incendiary bombs were dropped on Badajoz by rebel airplanes.

Men Are Disarmed.

Men identified with the Madrid government were arrested and disarmed as they crossed the border, but women and children were allowed to go free.

A major who commanded the government Storm Guards at Badajoz was among the refugees taken before the Elvas military government, where he described the horrors of the bombardment.

Most of the victims were women, children and elderly persons, he said.

The Governor of Badajoz also was reported to be among the refugees.

Members of the Portugese Radio Club announced they had learned the Madrid government was endeavoring to obtain mediation through a foreign power.

The president of the club said the information was obtained from secretaries in Spanish embassies who recently resigned.

Safety Not Guaranteed.

London, Aug. 14 (A.P.).—Red mobs control Madrid and the Spanish foreign office admitted it could not guarantee safety of foreign representatives who were preparing to quit the capital, it was said tonight by highly reliable diplomatic quarters.

One of the diplomats still in Madrid cabled his foreign office, it was stated, and advised that a final meeting would be held tomorrow to dissolve the diplomatic corps and make plans to leave the country.

ERNEST WELLINGTON MYERS.

Wilson Slayer Hangs Himself In Prison Cell

Myers Uses an Improvised Noose in Penitentiary at Baltimore.

Ernest Wellington Myers, putty-faced racketeer and gunman, who was sentenced to life imprisonment for the part he played in the "mistaken identity" murder of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper route carrier, hanged himself in his cell at Maryland State Penitentiary, in Baltimore, late last night.

The convict, who escaped the gallows in Rockville last spring, fashioned a noose from his bed sheet and attached it to a hook in the wall.

His body was found by Patrick Cullen, a guard, who was going up and down the cell tiers on his nightly rounds. When he opened the door to the gunman's cell, he saw the lifeless form of the man who, the court said, plotted death for another.

Myers had been dead more than an hour, a prison physician, who examined his body, declared. He had been alive an hour and a half prior to the discovery of his body.

Had Been Depressed.

Warden Patrick Brady said Myers had been depressed since he entered prison, but had given no indication he entertained an idea of killing himself.

Earlier in the day, Brady said, Myers wrote a letter to his wife, Mrs. Edna Myers, of Baltimore. When the letter went through the prison censors, it contained no hint of the tragic end Myers contemplated for himself.

Myers entered the prison May 15, shortly after Albert McDermott, alias John ("Slim") Dunn, and Albert I. Sutton, confederates of his in the crime, had been sentenced to life terms by Allegany County, Md., juries in Cumberland.

Their cells were not far from the one in which he hanged himself.

Local Writer Mapping Pogrom Against U.S. Jews, Magazine Says

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Reports of elaborate preparations for a pogrom against American Jews—allegedly engineered by a Washington writer—caused a furor in the Capital yesterday, prompting a police investigation and requests for Presidential intervention.

According to the magazine New Masses, plans for the wholesale massacre are now under way, headed by James True, local feature writer and news bureau chief. A story in this week's issue of the magazine charges that True is ready with "weapons and armed forces" to begin the "slaughter" next month.

The story is based on an interview with True by Porter Niles, staff writer of New Masses. True has offices in the National Press Building. Signs on his door read "America First, Inc., and The James True Associates."

According to the New Masses writer, True sat in his office fingering a revolver as he talked.

"We are getting set," True was quoted as saying. "We are preparing for September. When we have the pogrom, not even our 'pet Jews' will stay alive. We are not going to drive them from the country, we're going to bury 'em right here," the article quotes True as asserting.

Efforts to reach True yesterday were fruitless. His office was closed. It was understood he was attending a meeting in Asheville, N. C. True, who conducts a news service known as Industrial Control Reports, was barred from NRA press conferences by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in 1933 because of stories carried in his news reports.

Alarmed at True's threats, officials of New Masses communicated with President Roosevelt, urging a Federal investigation of his reported movement. At the same time, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, was asked to take a hand.

He assigned Detective Sergt. Frank O. Brass to investigate. Reading a complete report from Brass, however, Brown refused to com-

Step Made to Free American Hostage

Americans Warned.

Rebel massacre of 1,000 loyalist militia, including 100 women, in southern Badajoz Province was reported. The loyalist city of Badajoz was reported in flames.

The United States State Department warned Americans to leave Madrid at once or remain on their own responsibility, while it also demanded release of an American reported held as a hostage by loyalists.

Besieged residents of loyalist San Sebastian, fearing a rebel bombardment from the sea, prepared to flee.

Red mobs were reported to be in control of Madrid, with lives of foreigners endangered.

The Spanish government ordered release of all Germans imprisoned in areas under government control to avoid further friction with the Nazi state.

Warning that the United States may be forced to close its Madrid embassy, in which 85 Americans have found a haven in the bitter Spanish fighting, the United States last night served notice on all Americans still in that war-menaced capital that unless they leave at once they will remain "on their own responsibility."

Indicating the concern with which officials of this Government view developments in the Spanish civil war, Eric C. Wendelin, third secretary in charge of the embassy, notified the State Department that he and the other members of the staff were "using every effort" to persuade American nationals to leave Madrid at once. He expressed belief that "a considerable number" of them will depart tonight.

This development closely followed the ordering, by the State Department, of immediate steps to rescue J. O. Ambler, San Antonio, Tex., mining engineer, who was reported held as a hostage by Spanish government forces opposing the rebel troops. Ambler is reported to be one of 38 persons held at the Rio Tinto mines at Huelva, who were said to be threatened with death if the rebels approach the neighborhood.

Using Every Effort.

The State Department's announcement of Wendelin's warning to Americans in Madrid said:

"Mr. Wendelin has reported to the State Department the following:

"The American Embassy in Madrid is using every effort to persuade American nationals to leave Madrid immediately.

"Notification has been given that if conditions warrant the embassy will be closed, and that unless they are prepared to remain in Madrid on their own responsibility they should leave immediately.

"Mr. Wendelin said he believed a considerable number will leave by train for Alicante tomorrow the Townsend old-age pension plan would be indorsed.

As a climax to a day of noisy demonstrations, Father Coughlin made an unscheduled appearance in the convention late in the day and announced: "I wish to give our feelings on the money issue once and for all.

"I do not advocate the nationalization of banks, and never did. I do not believe in inflation. I do not believe in printing press money. I have never advocated inflation or printing press money. I do not believe in the gold standard any more than I believe in a pig standard.

"I do not believe in licensing private individuals to create money. I do not believe in the practice of usury, etc. I cannot subscribe to the present existence, with its present setup, of the Federal Reserve banks because they are usurious."

Selection of Sylvester V. McMahon, Cleveland lawyer, as permanent chairman brought a 10-minute demonstration. Prolonged cheering broke out again when McMahon announced Father Coughlin would head the committee on adoption of a constitution.

7,645 Certified.

Harold H. Burton, chairman of the credentials committee, reported that 7,645 delegates and alternates had been certified to the convention.

Father Coughlin's first appearance on the platform was the signal for a 15-minute outburst of cheering.

At one point the radio priest declared:

"America hasnt failed, nor has the Constitution, but it is sad to remark that sometimes Americans fail to preserve the Constitution."

The youthful Holt, "baby" of the Senate at 31 and the convention's keynote speaker, evoked prolonged applause when, in discussing Father Coughin's and for aboition of the Federal Reserve System, he cried:

"The money changers have not been driven from the temple."

President Roosevelt arrived in Cleveland for a four-hour stay at about the time the Coughlin-foundation.

Senator Holt, a critic of the ed organization opened its conven- Roosevelt relief policies, renewed his attack on Harry L. Hopkins, saying to the convention:

"Let me tell you that the WPA, as administered by Harry Hopkins, is one of the most disgraceful episodes in American history.

"I will not accept this wrong within my own party, whether it is my party or not. Millions of dollars of this fund for the relief of America has gone for political purposes—distributed to the bosses."

Assails "Gouging."

The West Virginia Senator assailed what he called "the gouging of consumers and investors by utility interests.

"Not only," he said, "have they taken their toll from those who consume or invest, but these same interests have invaded our elections in order that they might control those who make and administer the laws regulating utilities."

Holt quoted William Jennings Bryan in opposition to the Federal Reserve System, saying he could not comment better than did Bryan when the latter said that "the Federal Reserve banks that should have been the farmers' greatest protection have become his greatest foe."

"A Swell Racket."

McMahon asserted the function of the community banker under the Federal Reserve System was "a swell racket."

"When the Federal Reserve banker is given the right to issue money," McMahon continued, "he is thereby given the privilege to receive wealth that he does not produce and for which he gives nothing in exchange."

McMahon's appearance brought a new round of demonstrations and the biggest parade of the day, as delegates held up the proceedings while they paraded through choked aisles.

The chairman, who also is national secretary of the organization, said the worst phase of money manipulation "is the power under our banking system by which credit may be inflated, causing a boom at one time, and then contracted, causing a collapse of business and industry at another."

Asks "Few Simple Laws."

He claimed the enactment of "a few simple laws" would enable Father Coughlin to "remedy all this."

These included abolition of the Federal Reserve System, creation of a United States central bank with exclusive power to issue money, and provision that a dollar used in the payment of debt shall have the same purchasing power as the dollar paid over at the time the debt was incurred.

Allen Blackburn, of Detroit, who was announced as a speaker for the "Youth of America," asked the convention:

"Are we, the youth of America, supposed to listen while the crooner of Hyde Park sings his broken record song of 'I Promise You, I Promise You.'"

"The young men and young women of America are sick and tired of politics and politicians," Blackburn said. "We are sick of platforms, platitudes and promises, and of the men who talk and never act."

Townsend for Lemke.

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 14 (AP).—Holding both major parties "avowed enemies" of his old-age-pension plan, Dr. Francis E. Townsend today reiterated his support of Representative William Lemke for President and declared the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin was in "perfect accord" with him in backing the Union Party candidate.

"I'd support William Lemke for President if I knew he could carry only one State."

But Dr. Townsend thinks he can carry more than one State and means to mobilize Townsend supporters in those States in which the Union Party leader has a good chance of winning, he said.

The Political Arena

Salt Lake City, Aug. 14 (AP).—Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, said today "it is difficult to understand the attitude of many business leaders," in view of "rapid economic recovery."

He told interviewers that during his current tour of Federal Reserve banks he had "noted prosperous conditions throughout the Nation."

"In view of this fact," he said, "it is difficult to understand the attitude of many business and financial leaders who contend the Government is retarding business. Recovery during the past 18 months has been as rapid as any period in the history of our country and the soundness of this recovery is indicated by the unusual stability that has prevailed during the last year and a half in the general indicies."

Cleveland, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Rev. Charles E. Coughlin said tonight his election bet with Frederick Jenckes, of Providence, R. I., was off.

The priest told newsmen he had been advsed by Chester Carpenter, former Rhode Island supervsor for the National Union, that "it is illegal in Rhode Island for any person to make a wager of any nature on the outcome of an election."

In a recent speech in Rhode Island, Father Coughlin offered to wager $25,000, at 3 to 2, that Representative William Lemke, Union Party Presidential candidate, would carry the State. Jenckes promptly notified the priest he was prepared to post $16,666.66 to cover the bet.

Los Angeles, Aug. 14 (AP).—Mail to Republican national headquarters from Southern Democratic States is much heavier than in 1928, when former President Herbert Hoover carried several of them, John D. M. Hamilton, drum major of the Republican Presidential campaign, reported here today.

The Republican national chairman said he considered the increased Southern mail significant support of his predictions of a Republican victory in November.

Boston, Aug. 14 (AP).—Lieut. Gov. Joseph L. Hurley withdrew from the United States Senate race today, leaving only Mayor Robert Greenwood of Fitchwood opposing Gov. James M. Curley for the Democratic senatorial nomination.

At the same time Hurley denounced the Democratic State committee chairman, Joseph McGrath, for attempting to invalidate signatures on Hurley's nomination papers. Hurley then resigned from the Democratic State committee.

McGrath, declining to accept Hurley's resignation, simultaneously filed protests against the nomination papers of "all Townsend, Coughlin, Union Party and independent candidates for all offices filed to appear on the ballot November 3."

the doctors and Mrs. Hewitt, who is in New Jersey awaiting trial on a charge of attempting suicide.

"I was ill after returning home from Coronado, Calif., with mother and my aunt, Mrs. Harriet Eastman," Ann testified.

"Doctor Called."

"Dr. Tillman was called. He said I would have to be operated on."

"Were you told that anything other than an appendicitis operation was to be performed?" Assistant Prosecutor August Fourtner asked.

"I was told only that my appendix was to be removed," she replied.

Preceding Miss Hewitt, a nurse, Miss Ann Lindsey, testified Dr. Boyd employed her to care for Miss Hewitt after the operation on condition that she would not "talk."

Discovers Sterility.

Dr. Dan Del Prat, hospital executive, testified he made an examination in January, 1936, which showed Miss Hewitt, now 22, was sterile.

Miss Lindsey, plump and middle aged, said Dr. Boyd described Miss Hewitt as having "the mental age of a child of 10, with a sex complex."

"He said something must be done to protect the family," the nurse continued, and said he was afraid she might become an imbecile unless the operation was performed.

Dr. Irwin Wallace testified he administered the anesthetic for the operation and entered it in his own records as one of sterilization.

He added, however, that it consisted of the removal and adjustment of vital organs which made it doubly sure that Ann never would have a child.

Amelia Earhart in Race.

Crime Decline

report on enforcement of the white slave traffic act.

The white slave traffic report gives several of the specific instances mentioned above. Written in a terse, matter-of-fact style, the report reads like the fiction detective's case book. It shows, illustrating the various types of white slave traffic violations, the thorough investigation made by the Department of Justice agents.

It shows also the gullibility of the women involved in the traffic and the machine-like organization of the crime rings that exploit them.

One of the cases mentioned tells how four Philadelphians lived for five months on proceeds from the prostitution of a 19-year-old girl. The girl, "picked up" in a Philadelphia restaurant in April, 1935, was successively placed in houses of prostitution in Philadelphia, Wilkes-Barre, Waterbury Conn., and Folsom, N. J.

298 Convictions.

During the fiscal year of 1936, according to the report, 298 convictions were obtained in the Federal courts of persons violating the white-slave act, resulting in total sentences of 833 years, 6 months and 14 days.

Fines amounted to $42,830, which is in excess of fines for any fiscal year for the past decade. During June of this year there were more convictions for violation of the white-slave law than in any month for the past three years.

Illustrating that persons prosecuted under the act are not always men, the case of Mae Scheible was cited.

She was taken into custody by F. B. I. agents on February 4, 1936, in New York City, charged with violating the statute. Her arrest, it was pointed out, was the result of an intensive investigation during which it was learned girls were induced to come to her establishment in Central Park West from points outside the State.

'Red' Guard Forces Open Night Attack

Allegan, Mich., Aug. 14 (AP).—Regular troops of the invading "red" army launched a night attack tonight against positions along a 12-mile front held by the defending "blue" forces, composed of Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin National Guardsmen participating in the western Michigan war games.

Mechanized units of the "red" army thrust forward at the region about the Allegan City dam, a mile north of the headquarters of the Thirty-third Division.

At the same time Artillery units of both Thirty-second and Thirty-third National Guard divisions laid a theoretical curtain of fire along a county road from Burnips Corners to Allegan.

Long columns of Infantry were moved up during the day to reinforce critical points on the "front."

Umpires announced that so far the "red" invaders have suffered the heaviest losses in the operations which started yesterday morning.

Zioncheck Ruled Suicide.

Seattle, Aug. 14 (AP).—A coroner's jury today decided Representative Marion A. Zioncheck's five-story death leap last Friday was suicide. The inquest was routine with no witnesses and only the coroner's official report before the jury.

Hostile Trade Balance Feared

first six months than a year ago. The value of this class of imports totaled $199,600,000, compared with $169,100,000 a year ago. At the same time exports of these products totaled only $64,700,000, against $69,900,000 a year ago.

Although crude foodstuffs imported in the first six months averaged 5 per cent less than in 1935, their total volume was $159,900,000, against only $27,400,000 exported abroad.

Total at $9,000,000.

Revised Commerce Department figures showed the total unfavorable trade balance in all classes of trade was $9,000,000 for the first half-year. In other words, the United States imported a total of $1,163,200,000, against which it shipped abroad an aggregate of only $1,154,100,000.

Attention to this trend is called by George N. Peek, former trade adviser to the President, in his recent book, "Why Quit Our Own," in which he blames trade reverses on reciprocal tariff policies, and charges "our Nation has been offered to the world at a bargain."

"For the year 1935 our country became dependent upon foreign food imports to an extent unparalleled in our history," Peek said. "Still we curtailed production. Our imports of agricultural products increased by $248,000,000, while our imports of non-agricultural products increased $155,000,000. We are no longer feeding and clothing ourselves."

Comparing the first three months of 1936 with the first three months of 1935, Peek noted that "the same trend continued. Our exports of agricultural products increased $9,941,000 and our imports of agricultural products increased by $33,164,000."

Commenting on 1934 trade developments, Secretary of Commerce Roper recently stated that "the relatively marked increase in the merchandise imports in 1935 is clearly indicated in the trend of importations of leading import commodities. Of these commodities, only one group, wines and spirits, fell in value below purchases from abroad during 1934. Imports of vegetable oils and grain more than doubled, while importations of tin and wool (including mohair), rose more than 50 per cent."

Roper said then that the 1935 "improvement in domestic economic activity gave rise to increasing needs for imported raw materials, while the increase in general borrowing power resulted in a marked demand for certain tropical foods which are either not produced at home or not produced in sufficient quantities to meet domestic needs."

According to revised figures in the Commerce publication, "Trend of United States Foreign Trade," imports of crude materials for industry were increased at an accelerated rate in the first six months of 1936, which were 27 per cent higher than the same period in 1935.

Rose to $346,400,000.

The total volume of these imports rose to $346,400,000, compared with $272,300,000 in the first half of 1935. Exports of the same materials have amounted to only $276,800,000 this year, compared with $257,1000,000 in the first six months of 1935.

The upward trend in importations was manifest also in a 24 per cent increase in "semi-manufactures," which totaled $234,400,000 in the first half year, against $190,000,000 the same period last year. Exports of "semi-manufactures" were $192,600,000 in the first six months, compared with $164,800,000 a year ago.

The latest revision of trade figures, originally released in preliminary form three weeks ago, showed the United States was still well ahead in volume of finished manufactures exported. Exports of these finished goods amounted to $373,200,000 in the first six months, an increase of 17 per cent over the $488,800,000 exported a year ago. Imports of finished manufactures totaled only $210,700,000, an increase of 14 per cent over the $184,700,000 imported in the same period last year.

ment, other than say he was "looking into the matter."

Patented Truncheon.

The magazine writer said True had invented and patented a weapon in the form of a heavy police baton. It is listed at the U. S. Patent Office as a policeman's truncheon, the article said, but the interviewer said True calls it a "Kike Killer."

The New Masses story quoted True as promising to obtain revolvers and ammunition for all who are interested in taking part in the threatened massacre. He said, the story declared, that a downtown hardware store would furnish weapons without requiring a permit.

The article further stated True and his organization "does $12,000 worth of business annually with the hardware store." Anyone recommended by True may obtain guns and ammunition at wholesale prices, the New Masses writer said he was told.

Officials of the store, however, told a different story. True, they said, is a member of the Washington Pistol Club and has purchased weapons for target practice and hunting.

Deny Large Sales.

Contrary to the report he does an annual business of $12,000 with the concern, store officials said True's total bill was $128. He purchased—with permission from the police department—a .22-caliber automatic pistol, a .38-caliber revolver and two shotguns, the type used in duck hunting. It was said at the hardware store. This was in July, 1935.

The magazine story accuses True of fostering "an organization of night-riding terrorists, known as the Knights of the White Camellia." This organization, the story related, is composed of former Ku Klux Klan members.

The New Masses writer said True demonstrated his so-called "Kike Killer" during the interview.

"It is heavy enough to knock out Jews," True was quoted as saying, "and to poke Jews through the stomach."

The baton fashioned from hard wood and carved to a blunt point, is also made "lady's size," True was quoted as telling the magazine writer.

Convinced that True heads several anti-Semitic societies and is devoting his time to preparations for the reported pogrom, the magazine writer described him as "dangerous" and urged "immediate action" to thwart his plans.

"James True is no cracked exhibitionist," the story related, "but is a man respected in the business world."

True was at one time a reporter on the Chicago Tribune and later became editor of Printer's Ink, trade magazine.

True was dropped from membership in the business paper correspondents committee, a group composed of trade journal representatives after his clash with Gen. Johnson. His organization known as America First, Inc., has long been identified with anti-Communist movements.

U. S. Warns Nationals

official desire to permit all Germans to leave Spain as soon as possible and thus avoid further friction with the Nazi state. Germany already has protested and demanded compensation for the alleged execution of four German citizens at Barcelona by loyalist forces.

Following warnings from the United States Government to leave Madrid at once or remain on their own responsibility, between 10 and 20 Americans who took refuge at the United States Embassy prepared to leave for Alicante tonight. It was expected they would be accompanied by many other American residents of Madrid who did not take refuge at the embassy.

Prepare to Flee.

Irun, Spain, Aug. 14 (AP).—War-weary inhabitants of San Sebastian tonight prepared to evacuate their seaside resort in the face of a rebel threat to shell the city, already besieged by land and bombarded from the air.

Citizens here and in San Sebastian, along the Bay of Biscay, were fearful that a final rebel offensive would combine attack from land, sea and air.

While loyalist men and women fought to block the rebel advance toward the sea, noncombatants gathered together their possessions and prepared to flee.

In an effort to force departure of the menacing rebel cruiser Almirante Cervera, loyalists seized scores of suspected Fascists and threatened their deaths at the first shell of a sea offensive. Seven hundred prisoners arrested earlier also were marked for death if the rebel warship opened fire.

Throughout the day an armed truce was apparent. Neither side touched off the first shot expected to loose bitter battle and wholesale slaughter.

New supplies of food, a gift from the French General Confederation of Labor arrived but there still was a shortage. Water was being rationed and much of the supply was obtained from wells and springs outside the town.

Bitter Battle at Oviedo.

Madrid, Aug. 14 (AP).—Spain's Socialist government, backed by peasantry and labor, tonight marched against Oviedo in bitter battle against a rebel army.

Government troops were reported within the city fighting to the death in the streets. Loyalist aircraft and artillery laid down a protecting barrage.

The loyalist militia was determined to rout the rebel force in that extreme northwest corner of Spain and beat a path through the mountainous mining center to the Portuguese border.

Elsewhere there was little to mark important advances by either side in the twenty-eighth day of civil war.

The strong northern headquarters of rebels at Zaragoza was shelled by Loyalist artillery moving westward from Barcelona.

The State Department yesterday added to its staff in Spain by ordering Mahlon F. Perkins, of Washington, to Barcelona as consul general, where he also will have diplomatic rank.

Perkins has been on duty in the State Department for the last three years as assistant to the historical adviser. He entered the foreign service as a student interpreter in China in 1909 and most of his life since then has been spent in the Orient.

Portugal to Protest.

Lisbon, Portugal (Saturday), Aug. 15 (AP).—The Portuguese government instructed its charge d'affaires at Madrid early today to protest strongly to the Spanish government against violation of Portuguese territory by loyalist troops Thursday.

The Libon administration told its Madrid representative to use "terms of great energy" in holding the Spanish government responsible for an alleged incursion of Spanish loyalists who were said to have seized and shot dead a Spanish officer who had taken refuge on a Portuguese estate.

Crops Improve Over Maryland In Past Month

Wheat, Corn, Tobacco All in Good Condition, Say College Park Experts.

In marked contrast to most other sections of the country, crop conditions improved generally in Maryland during July, according to the August 1 crop survey announced yesterday at College Park by J. A. Ewing, agricultural statistician, and Paul L. Warner, junior agricultural statistician, of the Maryland Crop Reporting Service.

Winter wheat yields were considerably higher than earlier expected and corn and tobacco production prospects showed great improvement over last month. Indicated yield of all important crops combined was 96 per cent of the ten-year (1921-30) average.

The report showed that while July rainfall for the State as a whole was practically normal, there were still some sections which were dry at the end of the month. In most areas, however, there is sufficient soil moisture to permit plowing.

Wheat Excellent.

Marked by excellent quality, winter wheat production is placed at 8,900,000 bushels, as compared with 7,788,000 bushels forecast a month ago; 8,774,000 bushels in 1935 and 8,630,000 bushels, the average of the 1928-32 period.

Oats are a short crop on account of decreased acreage and low yields. Barley production will be considerably below that of last year largely as the result of severe winter injury. Condition of buckwheat is below average.

Corn condition now is above average, the report showed. Present prospects indicate a crop of 15,840,000 bushels, as compared with 17,544,000 bushels last year and the five-year average of 14,431,000 bushels. With little storm damage in the main producing sections, the tasseling period was marked by favorable weather conditions.

Tobacco condition on August 1 was above average and only slightly below that on the same date a year ago. The present outlook is for a crop of 25,200,000 pounds, against 26,820,000 pounds in 1935 and the five-year average of 24,318,000 pounds. Severe hail damage was reported in some sections.

Tame hay production is the lightest in years, according to the report. Potato prospects show some improvement over those of a month ago, though production is placed both below last year and the five-year average.

Landon Charts Eastern Tour, To Meet Chiefs

Nominee Will Confer With G. O. P. Leaders On Way to N. Y.

By the Associated Press.

Estes Park, Colo., Aug. 14.—A series of traveling conferences with State and county Republican leaders was arranged by Gov. Alf M. Landon today as he charted his Eastern presidential campaign tour.

The nominee checked over more than 30 rear platform appearances en route East, and discussed tentative proposals for stops on his return to Topeka, Kans.

Eastbound he will pass through northeastern Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, and into New York. His aids said similar arrangements for meeting party leaders would be made as soon as a return route is determined.

Ralph West Robey, member of his research staff, conferred with the Governor. Robey has specialized in Government finance and banking—a subject which some Republican leaders expect the Governor to discuss at West Middlesex, Pa., where he opens his Eastern drive.

Gov. and Mrs. Landon had as luncheon guests Mrs. Henry Doorly, wife of the editor of the Omaha, Neb., World-Herald. With his family Landon drove to Estes Park for a brief visit. The cold, which had kept him indoors, was improved.

Backs Landon

O. E. Farley, secretary-treasurer of the Council of Carpenters of Kansas, said last night that Gov. Alf M. Landon's "strike record establishes his fairness to labor."

Speaking during the William Hard radio hour, under the auspices of the Republican National Committee, Farley said Gov. Landon had kept his pledges of Kansas labor.

Gov. Landon, Farley added, appointed one of the original organizers of the Kansas State Federation of Labor to be labor commissioner of the State. He said the Republican Presidential nominee also had recommended to the Legislature a program of labor legislation, including a proposal for preventing the misuse of injunctions in labor disputes.

Farley's reference to Landon's "strike record" came after he had reviewed the Governor's action in sending troops into the area of the lead and zinc mines in Kansas last year.

At that time, Farley said, Landon "blamed the mine operators for most of the trouble," and for organizing a company union.

Hazen Opposes Jaywalker Ban; Seal Gets Rule

Proposed Regulation Sent to Counsel for Study of Provisions.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday explained that he had no intention of promulgating a ban on jaywalking as he referred a proposed traffic regulation to Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal for an opinion.

The regulation, recommended by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, would empower police to arrest pedestrians who disobeyed their instructions. However, attorneys pointed out that it was too broad and probably could not be sustained in court.

"I had no intention of prohibiting jaywalking," Hazen said. "That would be impossible with the present police personnel. I do believe, however, that police should have authority to make arrests when pedestrians ignore their instructions at intersections. They can't do it now."

Indications were that a new regulation or an amendment to present traffic rules would evolve from a study of the problem by the Corporation Counsel's office.

take when he stopped to deliver a morning newspaper before dawn on October 23, 1934, Myers was convicted in Rockville last April.

Myers was the driver of the death car in which McDermott, Sutton, Claude Bailey, Anthony (Tony the Stinger) Cugino and William Cleary went to Takoma Park to "get" McDonald, who, they alleged, had been turning in gambling houses to the police in order to get protection for his own.

McDermott and Sutton obtained a change of venue to Allegany County after their fellow convict had been found guilty.

While his underworld "buddies" were being tried across the State, Myers paced his cell in Montgomery County Jail, in Rockville.

Police were forced to take especial precautions to prevent any attempt of the willowy gangster to escape.

Time and again there came reports he was desperate and was attempting to end his own life. Guards reported one day last spring that he momentarily had gone insane, and was burning the tips of his fingers with cigarette butts.

The death of Myers leaves alive but three of the gang that slew Wilson, father of several children.

McDermott and Sutton are serving their life terms not far from where Myers slipped a noose around his neck and died.

Bailey, one of the trigger men, was fatally wounded about a year ago when he attempted to escape from Lorton Reformatory and was shot.

Cugino, described as one of the most desperate killers the Eastern seaboard ever has seen, committed suicide in his jail cell in New York after confessing to more than a dozen murders.

Myers was convicted on the testimony of a moon-faced former friend of gangland, William Henry Cleary, who confessed he was the "finger man" who was to have pointed out McDonald and badly botched his job when he put the finger on Wilson instead.

Cleary was granted immunity for turning State's evidence.

Third Precinct Undermanned, Reporter Finds

Station House Clean, Well Equipped; Complaint Is Lack of Men.

This is the second of a series of articles, depicting conditions existing in the police stations of the Metropolitan Police today. A Post reporter yesterday investigated conditions in the Third Precinct. The next in the series will appear tomorrow.

By Bill Richardson.

In the Third Precinct this is the situation:

The walls of the station house are clean enough. They have been freshly painted. The office equipment is good. The cell block, although too small, is clean, also. The station house is big enough for the men who work there.

But there are not enough men.

That is the problem of the Third Precinct. It stretches from the Potomac River to Euclid street one way and from Fifteenth street to Twenty-sixth street the other way. That roughly is more than 300 blocks.

As there are 101 men in the Third Precinct, that should mean three blocks for every man to cover. But there are three shifts. And that leaves, roughly, ten blocks for every man to cover. Sickness decreases man power. Days off, too. Then there are 100 vacations to be filled. On an average, 20 men cover those 300 blocks every shift That includes everybody—officers, foot men, patrol cars, the captain and the janitor.

Shifts Reduced to Four.

Lieut. Arthur C. Belt, who was on duty yesterday, said he can remember plenty of times last winter when only four men a shift covered the whole area.

"That included everybody," he said.

Once the Third Precinct was not so big. It extended from the river to Q street. But they moved the boundary on to Euclid in the second alphabet several years ago when the Second and Eighth Precincts were combined. That was an economy move.

They also had three scout cars once. But they had ot give up one of them because they needed more men on the beats.

Even now, Lieut. Belt said, men are doubling up on beats.

Last night two men were covering two beats that four men usually cover. The first beat extended from Constitution to Pennsylvania avenue and from Rock Creek to Twenty-third street. The second extended from Constitution avenue to Pennsylvania avenue and from Twenty-third street to Twentieth street northwest.

Next to the Second Precinct, the Third, Lieut. Belt said, makes more arrests than any other in Washington.

Has Eight Cells.

The cell block has eight cells.

"That is not enough," Lieut. Belt said. "We have to move prisoners to other stations every Saturday night."

The building itself is much like No. 2. But the walls have been recently painted and the whole building remodeled this year.

The building is a firetrap, though, police officials admit. It was erected before the Civil War—before buildings were made fireproof.

However, it is clean, and the walls are not cracked.

Aged Man Is Killed By Ten-Foot Fall

John Lindsay, 75, of 2117 N street northwest, died last night from a fractured skull an hour after he had fallen ten feet from the porch of his home onto a concrete alley.

Witnesses said the old man apparently became dizzy and lost his balance as he was sitting on the railing of the porch. He was taken to Emergency Hospital in an ambulance and died an hour later.

Lindsay was a native of Montrose, Scotland. He came to Washington at the turn of the century and was in the slate roofing business for 35 years until his retirement six years ago.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah Jane Lindsay; a daughter, Annie Lindsay, and two grandchildren, Mrs. Robert Callow and J. Lindsay Butler. Funeral arrangements had not been made last night.

Five Are Held For Newspaper Strike Disorder

Police Say Trio Beaten; Labor Leader Urges Peaceful Methods.

By the Associated Press.

Seattle, Aug. 14.—Police reported three persons beaten and five arrested today in disorders attending the strike of Newspaper Guild workers at the Post-Intelligencer.

Hundreds of pickets wearing symbols of the guild and the Teamsters, Loggers and Longshoremen's Union kept the Post-Intelligencer building surrounded, but there was no activity because the paper had suspended publication.

Both the Times and the Star editorially condemned Seattle labor leaders, charging they forced the Post-Intelligencer, a Hearst publication, to suspend.

Truck Drivers Held.

Harry Mineken 45, and Randolph Harrison, 33, truck drivers, were arrested after the alleged beating.

The Star commented that the right of publication had been suppressed "by the force of a minority in its own interests."

The Times said:

"By the order of a labor leader, the Post-Intelligencer, Seattle's oldest newspaper, was compelled to suspend publication.

"Out of the quescent fingers of a complacent mayor and chief of police, slipped the government of this once great city. Today it rests in the firm hands of Dave Beck and his brawny crew of teamsters, loggers and longshoremen."

Favors Peaceful Strike.

Beck, president of the Joint Council of Teamsters, said earlier in the day the presence of teamsters in the newspaper picket line did not mean the council had any connection with the strike. He said he sympathized as a labor leader with the attempts of the Post-Intelligencer staff to organize, but that he felt the strike should be settled through conferences rather than violence.

The Post-Intelligencer, in a statement, blamed the situation on its discharge of two editorial employes, "one for inefficient and wasteful methods, the other for gross insubordination."

The guild issued a statement saying:

Youth, 18, Drowns Near Benning Span

An 18-year-old boy, Nevitt Rosner, of 1811 Third street northeast, drowned yesterday while swimming in the Anacostia Branch 100 feet above Benning Bridge, with his brother, Joseph, 16.

According to witnesses, Nevitt, a poor swimmer, waded beyond his depth and sank. His body was recovered by Harbor Police. The Fire Rescue Squad worked for half an hour in a vain attempt to revive him.

The youth has been living at the Third street address with his brother for nearly a year. His mother is now living at Annapolis, Md. His father, Joseph Rosner, police said, is at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Yankee Trade Stands to Win Pan - Americas

Outcome Rests on Exchange and Willingness to Buy as Well as Sell.

Harry W. Frantz has just returned from a 16,000-mile air trip around South America. Following are his observations concerning commercial trends affecting the United States.

By Harry W. Frantz.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

The United States faces a long commercial struggle in South America, with a fair chance of gaining ground if the "buy-as-well-as-sell" trade philosophy finds continued acceptance in this country and intricate problems of foreign exchange can be solved.

Germany and Japan are making a powerful thrust for markets in many countries where British, French and Italian competition with American traders always has been formidable. From Para on the Amazon to Mendoza in the Andean hills, shop windows and traders' activities attest the steady pressure of German and Japanese commerce, greatly aided by national policies.

More than at any time in history, prestige is a great factor in South American markets. "Good neighbor" policy at Washington, the rapid development of the Pan-American Airways System, the fascination of American automobiles and motion picture films are among the factors establishing a favorable background for Yankee traders.

Price Cutting Ruthless.

Their big hurdles are exchange control systems, compensation agreements between some South American and European countries, ruthless price-cutting by Germans or Japanese who are willing to undersell Americans by 20 to 30 per cent on many manufactured articles, and the rapid diversification of agriculture and industry in some countries which creates a local interest in "home markets."

In every major capital of South America, political and public sentiment toward the United States is definitely friendly, but this does not detract from the general determination to drive hard bargains in matters of commerce and finance.

At every port on the southern continent visited there was continual evidence of the great international rivalry for air mail and passenger traffic. The consensus was that South America is already far more "air-minded" than North America, due particularly to the tremendous economy of time and distance of air routes relative to ocean and river steamer systems.

Brazil Expands Cotton.

In Brazil, the immediate outstanding concern of American businessmen is the intense competition from Germans, aided by their aski (trading) mark system, which compels an equivalence of exports-imports and the rapidly increasing importance of Japan in the Brazilian economy.

Underlying the situation is the fact that Brazil is rapidly extending her cotton production, and gradually escaping her former excessive dependence on the coffee crop. Practically, this creates a need for overseas consuming markets for cotton, among which the most favorable are in Germany and Japan.

Japan sent a trade mission to Brazil last year, and subsequently stepped up her cotton purchases. A Brazilian commercial mission is now en route to Japan to study the possibilities of mutual commercial interest. Japan's cotton purchases in five months of this year were well over 200,000 bales. Her buying capacity is virtually unlimited, and Japanese labor is valued on Brazilian plantations.

Argentina Receptive.

Argentina is a commercial battleground for the world, with the United States' position more hopeful since industrial improvement has renewed American purchases of raw wool and hides, while the drought of 1934 and 1936 in this country encourages exports of grain, flaxseed and livestock products to the United States. There is extraordinary interest in Buenos Aires regarding current United States crop statistics.

Argentine political sentiment was reported by many local observers as more friendly toward the United States than at any time in the present century, due to satisfaction over this country's disposition to avoid intervention in Latin-American disputes. The desire to sell frozen or chilled beef in this country, now prohibited by sanitary regulations, is still a major consideration in all Argentine trade circles.

Chilean economy is marked by internal improvement, and extensive building construction due to relief from taxes on new construction. Trade with the United States is handicapped by exchange difficulties, with some recent differences when Chile denied exchange for imports of American automobiles.

Some Americans feel that exchange control has been applied in a manner unduly burdensome to the United States; the Chileans counterclaim that the difficulty had its real beginning when this country levied a 4-cent per pound import tax on copper, and when sales of natural nitrate encountered the ever-increasing competition of the synthetic product. Some experts think that the entire international balance of payments must be re-analyzed in a realistic manner, and that new machinery for international financial co-operation may become necessary.

Peru has come through years of depression with an economic success which surpassed expectations abroad. Her diversified production of petroleum, metals and agricultural products enabled her alone of South American countries, except Venezuela, to avoid an exchange control system.

Colmobia has an exchange problem, due partly to fairly low prices for coffee, but building construction and a general tendency toward modernization of construction and transportation has given much hope to United States business concerns.

29th Division In Mock Battle At Indiantown

Three Generals Watch While Units Engage in Mimic Warfare.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Indiantown Gap, Pa., Aug. 14.—The Twenty-ninth Division, composed of Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia National Guard units, engaged in mimic warfare here today and tonight while three generals watched.

The two regiments of the Ninety-first Infantry Brigade, of Virginia, commanded by Brig. Gen. Samuel Gardner Waller, opposed each other in a combined attack and defense problem. The First Virginia attacked the 116th Virginia, with supporting fire from a battery of the 111th Virginia Field Artillery. Machine guns and rifles crackled as the Virginians carried on under a boiling sun.

The Fifty-eighth Brigade, of Maryland, tonight was bivouacked at the approaches to Swatara Gap in readiness for an attack on a theoretical enemy. The brigade, commanded by Brig. Gen. Washington Bowie, composed of the First or County Regiment and the Fifth of Baltimore, moved by truck to its bivouac, where pup tents were pitched. It is to attack at dawn, supported by Maryland and Virginia artillery units.

The 121st Engineers, of Washington, are scheduled to engage in engineering operations. Supervised by the commanding officer, Col John W. Oehmann, the Engineers practiced bridge building and combat exercises today. Tonight the First Battalion, commanded by Maj. Ralph S. Childs, is to make reconnaissance. The Second Battalion, commanded by Maj. Clarence S. Shields, is to build bridge approaches and other construction work in the dark.

Maj. Gen. Winfield S. Price, commanding the Forty-fourth National Guard Division, composed of New Jersey and Delaware troops, and his staff of 34 officers, arrived early today. Later Maj. Gen E. C. Shannon, commanding the Twenty-eighth Pennsylvania Division, arrived with a small party.

It is expected that the two generals will confer with Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding the Twenty-ninth Division, and Maj. N. Szilagyi, of the National Guard Bureau, on National Guard problems and other military matters, while they are in camp.

Police Break Into Shop, Find Jeweler Beaten Unconscious

Max Bass, 55-year-old jeweler, was found unconscious with serious head injuries early yesterday afternoon, when passersby saw one of his hands protruding through a curtain into the showcase of his store at 1133 Seventh street northwest.

As the door was locked, passersby suspected he was ill or injured. Police battered down the door and found Bass, his head bleeding and battered, lying on the floor.

He was taken to Sibley Hospital, where his condition last night was reported as "serious." He suffered, police said, possible fracture of the skull.

Police last night were looking for two colored men in connection with the case. They believe Bass, who lives by himself in a back room of the building, was beaten and robbed. However, they found no evidence that jewelry was missing from the store.

Bass has two daughters, police said, in New York. His wife died recently.

At the time Bass was injured, probably about noon, there was one policeman on the beat of 48 blocks which included the square on which the injured man's store is located. The policeman was J. P. Zier, of the Second Precinct. He usually covers only eight squares and has the help of another policeman.

Yesterday, Zier was covering four beats by himself in the district in which more crimes are committed than any other section in the city. He was patrolling beats from Fifth to Thirteenth streets and from K to Q streets.

Records Fall As Heat Bakes Drought Zone

Mercury Hits 116 in Midwest $10,000,000 Seed Program Discussed.

By the Associated Press.

The Midwest's third 1936 heat wave went on another record-breaking spree yesterday with Kansas, Oklahoma, southern Nebraska and western Missouri recording readings as high as 116 degrees.

Showers were predicted for Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, and Iowa, however, and light rains were forecast for northern Illinois and Indiana. Texas, which reported 17 heat deaths for the week, was enjoying cooler weather.

One of the hottest spots in the drought and heat-stricken sector was Emporia, Kans., with 116. At Kansas City, the mercury pushed past 112, an all-time record. Topeka, Kans., had its second consecutive day of 113, only one degree lower than the all-time mark.

Seed Program Talked.

High temperatures included:

Kansas—Lawrence, 114; Manhattan and Pratt, 113; Atchison, 111; Chanute and Salina, 110; Wichita, 109.

Missouri—Nevada, 104; Carthage, 104; Joplin, 105.

Nebraska—Falls City, 114; Lincoln, 101.

A $10,000,000 seed purchase program to help farmers whose grain for next season's planting was destroyed by drought was framed yesterday by Administration officials.

While the seed program was discussed, the drought's devastating effects were reflected on many fronts. Increased farm and food products prices pushed the wholesale commodity price index up 1 per cent. The Forest Service reported 1,078 fires during the first ten days of August. Shortages of red spring and durum wheat foreshadowed continued imports.

Cost Plus Plan.

Plans for purchasing grain seed through the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation on funds from the Farm Credit Administration were made at a conference this afternoon between F. R. Wilcox, president of the corporation, and W. I. Myers, farm credit governor.

But officials said it might not be possible to make an announcement before Tuesday of next week.

The price to farmers would represent the cost of the Government plus carrying charges. Sales would be made on a cash basis.

Omaha, Nebr., Aug. 14 (AP).—Two "firebug" suspects were hunted tonight in investigation of an early morning blaze which destroyed the Western League Baseball Park and nine nearby homes.

Fire Chief Arthur Olsen said his department's arson squad was searching for two men reported loitering about the park shortly before discovery of the fire, which resulted in injury to 15 persons.

Stamps Worth $75,000.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 14 (AP).—Philatelists from throughout the country brought stamps valued at $75,000 to the annual convention of the Precancel Stamp Society, which got under way today.

Rev. J. P. Lonargan, Famous Priest, Dies

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—The "Priest of a Million Dead," himself is dead.

The Rev. John P. Lonargan, 74, for 25 years chaplain of Calvary Cemetery, in Long Island City, died after a long illness in a hospital last night.

He once remarked humorously that he had the largest Catholic parish in the world after that of the Pope, and pointed to the 1,000 burial rites at which he had officiated.

In the Blissville section of Long Island City he was known familiarly as "The Priest of a Million Dead."

Jeering Crowd Watches Slayer Die on Gallows

By the Associated Press.

Owensboro, Ky., Aug. 14.—A crowd of 10,000 white persons—some jeering, other festive, but generally orderly—watched a prayerful colored man put to death today on Daviess County's gallows, authorized by Kentucky law for the hanging of a convicted rapist.

The county's matronly, plump sheriff, Mrs. Florence Thompson, saw to it the court's sentence that Rainey Beathea, 22, "be hanged by the neck until dead" for the assault-murder of a 70-year-old white woman, was carried out. Arthur L. Hash, former Louisville policeman, sprung the trap.

A few persons near the gallows grabbed bits of the hood as souvenirs after two physicians pronounced Bethea dead.

Bethea, who in unsuccessful court appeals repudiated confessions that he ravished and slew Mrs. Elza Edwards, a widow, the night of June 10, knelt at the scaffold base toward the rising sun and mumbled an inaudible prayer. Father Herman Lammers, Catholic priest from Louisville, held a cross before him.

From the crowd came scattered shouts of "Take him up!" . . . Up on the scaffold where we can see him . . . Let's go"

On the trap, Bethea again faced the East and talked quietly with his spiritual adviser. The trap opened. The rope jerked taut.

Before being brought here early today from a Louisville jail, Bethea penciled a note to a sister, Ora Fladger, of Nichols, S. C., saying he was "saved." Authorities did not grant a request in the note that his body be sent there.

WomanAttacks Suitor With Ax, Then Kills Self

Westminster, Md., Police Blame Jealousy; Man's Skull Fractured.

By the Associated Press.

Westminster, Md., Aug. 14.—Police blamed jealousy today for an ax-attack on a man and the death of a girl in a 40-foot plunge.

Deputy Sheriff Walter Shipley said the man, John Hyde, told him Miss Grace Lippy attacked him with the ax, attempted to hang herself, cut her throat and dropped from the fire escape of her own apartment.

Naming the motive as the girl's jealousy, Deputy Shipley added:

"That's what the man told me. He said he'd been paying attentions to this girl and he went out with another woman and she found it out."

Dr. Clifford Taylor said Hyde had a fractured skull. He sent him to a Baltimore hospital for further treatment.

Ax Wrapped in Paper.

Shipley said the ax was a new one, apparently bought a few hours before the tragedy. With the ax wrapped in paper, he said, the girl telephoned Hyde, operator of a quarry, from a confectionery store. Ann Voght, clerk in the store, said Miss Lippy appeared "in a daze" when the clerk noted the wrapped object and asked her if she were going to play tennis.

Over the telephone the girl asked Hyde to come to her apartment. He said that when he arrived she asked him to open a window. While he was at the window, Shipley said Hyde told him, the girl struck him with an ax, knocking him unconscious. When he recovered, the deputy quoted him as saying, Miss Lippy was hanging in the doorway from a short length of sash cord. He told Shipley he cut the body down and went for aid.

Found With Throat Cut.

The deputy said that when Hyde returned, he said he found her with her throat cut. He went again to ask aid. When he returned, he found the girl was gone. She lay on the ground 40 feet below the window of her apartment in a converted ice-cream factory.

Shipley said the girl died a few seconds after he arrived on the scene. He saw that her throat was cut and climbed the fire escape leading to her apartment. The rooms were blood-spattered but empty. At the door, the deputy said, he saw Hyde, covered with blood, climbing the steps on his hands and knees.

The girl, 26, was an employe of a shoe factory here. Her family live on the outskirts of the town. Hyde, 45, is a widower.

Judge Says His Patience Is Practically Exhausted as Case Ends.

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Aug. 14.—Superior Court Judge Goodwin J. Knight termed his patience "practically exhausted" today as he stamped the Mary Astor-Dr. Franklyn Thorpe child custody case closed, and threatened one of its principals, Playwright George S. Kaufman, with a jail term.

"I'll put this man Kaufman in jail if we can ever find him," said Judge Knight.

Kaufman, subpenaed by Dr. Thorpe's attorneys, failed to appear in court.

A settlement in the custody case was reached last night after two days of wrangling, whereupon Roland Rich Woolley, attorney for Miss Astor, issued a statement claiming victory in the litigation that brought from Dr. Thorpe's counsel a threat to reopen the case.

Later, Joseph Anderson, attorney for Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, former husband of the movie star, said Dr. Thorpe had agreed not to reopen the struggle.

Yesterday, Judge Knight approved a settlement that provided for the impounding of Miss Astor's diary and awarded the custody of her 4-year-old daughter, Marylyn, to the actress for nine months of the year and to Dr. Thorpe for three months.

Leading the Watergate Symphony Orchestra on August 21, which has been designated as Government night, will be Lieut. A. F. G. E. and C. I. O.

The suspension of John L. Lewis' committee for industrial organization by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor definitely will be an issue at the Detroit convention of the A. F. G. E.

At least one "New Deal" lodge has instructed its delegates to fight to have the convention instruct the A. F. G. E delegates to the A. F. of L. Convention in November to oppose the suspension of the C. I. O. unions.

In the past A. F. G. E. delegates to the A. F. of L. convention have been appointed by the A. F. G. E. executive coucil. C. I. O. sympathizers are planning to have the Detroit convention elect the delegates or, failing in that, to have the convention instruct the delegates how to vote on the Lewis-Green split.

Since the most ardent of the C. I. O. sympathizers among Government employes are generally grouped in the so-called "New Deal" lodges, the first test of strength on the C. I. O. issue is likely to revolve around the recent suspension by the A. F. G. E. executive council of the Justice Lodge, which will come up at the convention for final action. The "New Deal" lodges have opposed this suspension and are taking the leading role in the recall proceedings that have been instituted against the four Washington members of the executive council who were responsible for the Justice suspension, Vice Presidents Ira Y. Bain, Michael Schaefer and G. Carroll Dimond, and Treasurer Cecil E. Custer.

For a referendum to be held on the recall question the support of 15 per cent of the lodges is necessary. Thus far six lodges are known to be committed to recall proceedings, Agriculture Lodge, 31; Beltsville Lodge, 125; WPA Lodge, 139; Labor Lodge, 12; Resettlement Lodge, 206, and Veterans Administration Lodge, 17.

The Justice Union is planning to present its case against J. Edgar Hoover, for the dismissal of eight fingerprint employes from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, to the public at a mass meeting on August 31. Hoover has been invited to the meeting.

Hydro-Electric Plant

That model hydro-electric plant on display in the entrance lobby of the Interior Department is the same one that was shown at the Chicago World's Fair. It was built by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce back in 1931 and was shown at Houston, Tex., in 1932, and Atlantic City, the year after. It may be exhibited at the forthcoming World Power Conference.

The water that runs through the display comes from a seven-gallon tank behind the model plant. The water is pumped from this tank to the reservoir on top of the hill, is run over the falls past the plant and back into the tank. The entire unit is self-operating, the only maintenance required being to keep the tank filled to a certain level. In ten hours of operation, usually about a pint of water is lost through evaporation.

E. C. Warren, Howard E. Way and Thomas McMain worked under Nicholas Eckhardt in building the model. It was to have been the first of a series of similar exhibits of different American industries. The idea never bore fruit, however, Eckhardt explained, because of lack of funds.

An editorial complaining about the freeze-in promotion in the Adjutant General's Office in the War Department is the reason there was no July issue of "This 'n' That," publication of the A. F. G. E. lodge in the office.

In the August issue, published this week, Editor R. S. Thomas explains that after the paper had been stencilled and mimeographed, "certain editorial material met with serious objection from an office standpoint, from several members of the executive board of the lodge who ordered it killed." On investigation, we learned the offending item was a complaint about the freeze-in promotion.

Delegates of the A. G. O. Lodge to the Detroit convention will be G. Carroll Dimond, Edward J. McHinnes, Lillian M. Fowler and Patrick J. Fitzgibbons. Alternates are Harry J. Keller, Janet Donnelly, Thomas L. Suter and Joseph Sullivan.

In the foreword to the third volume of documents on the Quasi-War between the United States and France that has just been placed on sale by the Navy Department, Capt. Dudley Knox praises five civilian employes for their assistance in the preparation of the volumes.

The employes commended are Henry F. Lunenberg, chief clerk of the naval records section; Loretta I. MacCrindle, Catherine M. MacDonnell, Mrs. Alma R. Lawrence and Mrs. Clara R. Collins, all of whom have been working on the project since its beginning, two years ago. It required one year to prepare the first volume and only seven months for the third. Lunenberg hopes to get the time required down to five or six months so the Navy will be able to publish two volumes a year as is planned.

Daisy Brunette, secretary of the labor branch of Local 2 of the N. F. F. E., now at Georgetown Hospital, is well enough to see visitors . . . Eva W. Burton, treasurer of the branch, is vacationing at Ocean City, N. J.

The O'Mahoney-La Follette bill providing for the extension of civil service laws, the creation of a Federal personnel council and the signing of an oath by all personnel officers that they have not been guided by politics or favoritism in the appointment or promotion of civil servants, has been endorsed by the N. Save Red Clover Seed, College Park Aid Urges College Park, Md., Aug. 14 (AP).—Forrest S. Holmes, in charge of the seed laboratory at the University of Maryland, said today a prospective shortage of red clover seed made it advisable for Maryland farmers to save as much of the seed as they can.

The drought, Holmes said, threatened to reduce the grass and clover seed supplies in the principal producing sections. Maryland, which he said stood sixth last year in the amount of seed produced, harvests a type peculiarly suitable for this climate, Holmes added.

On the Air Today

During the vacation absence of John Heiney, Post Radio Editor, his column will be conducted by various Washington radio personalities. Today's guest columnist is Lee Everett, WMAL'S "Night Watchman."

"A button is pressed by a child's finger and the work of 1,000,000 men is done." I believe it was a former President of the United States, John Adams, at least one of the Adams boys, that handed down that weighty statement. It's a bit too far-fetched to imagine his remark might have been prophetic of radio. Yet such, gentle reader, are the facts today—the child's hand and the button, I mean.

You know the other man's field always looks greener, and the pastures on the other side of the brook always look cooler and more inviting. I wondered for a long time, just what radio editors did with their extra time. I was satisfied there was a lot of it. Too, I always wanted to write a radio column—at least once. I have found out two things now—first, what the editors do with all their extra time. There isn't any. It's spent in trying to figure out something else to write about. Second, I have "attained." I mean I am at last writing a column. What to write about? Quien sabe. I had wondered what it would be like to see an entire column devoted to just me. I have tried that. Frankly, I must say I found the subject-matter so darned limited and uninteresting I gave that up, too. Once again—about everything has been said about radio that can be said in the thousands of lines that appear from the news sheets each day. There seems to be nothing I can add to it. And so, I sit here this mornnig—the time 2:30 ante meridian (wondering what in the world to write about. I still don't know. You've already agreed with me? Good.

And why 2:30 in the morning? Because, "My Little Black Sheep," I have just left you to navigate for yourselves, which I hope you'll do with safety. And after all, what more interesting could I write about than you. Here, for instance, I sit in the studio. The red and green lights over the control switches, that a few moments ago were burning so brightly, are dark, and once again the studio, that erstwhile rang with the music of Fatts Waller, or the tender softness of Russ Morgan, is now quiet and still. We've had a good time tonight—at least I have. Your calls have been interesting and with one or two exceptions, very kind. Let's see—we played the wedding march for a newly married couple out in Northeast. Then there was the dear old couple celebrating 50 years of married life together—and we played "When Your Hair has Turned to Silver" for them—then there was that party out on Connecticut avenue that wanted some hot music—"White Heat" was the selection I believe. Of course we had quite a few "Knock Knocks"—about a hundred I think (one new one in the bunch, too).

How did the "powers that be" come to have this "Night Watchman" program? Well it was a sort of experiment—like a new kind of biscuit, or a salad. There was the question just how many people were up and about at that hour in our Capital City. The results were both interesting and astounding. The last call we had tonight was from B. M. in Northeast Washington requesting "Lights Out." It was call number 14,423—yes, we keep a record of all your calls, since our first night. And, since that first night, we've come to know our "listening family" pretty well. We know that Elizabeth is going to want "There's a Whistle in the Thistle"—Skippy will want "My Romance" or a Jan Garber recording—Texas will want the "Last Round Up" or "Home on the Range," and those boys from down Memphis way will want the "Memphis Blues." It's interesting, and if you have the fun I have, then life is good, and very worth while. It's just a worm's eye view of Washington radio after midnight. It's a lot of fun and we hope the experiment will continue to bring you entertainment.

Dog gone. Look at that clock. Day is breaking and here I sit still talking to you. Go on to bed. I'll be with you again tomorrow night, along about 12 o'clock. In the meantime, be good, take care of yourselves. It's just a very sleepy Nightwatchman saying, "Good night to ye, my little black sheep, bless ye, and may the Lord take a likin' to ye."

LEE EVERETT.

In Old Kentucky.

No sooner had the trap been sprung at the public hanging at Owensboro, Ky., yesterday, than a wild scramble began among the multitude which had come to satisfy its bloodlust. They wanted, and secured, bits of the hood which had covered the face of the victim.

Not content with having seen a human soul hurled to eternity, they wanted a souvenir of the occasion, something to prove to themselves and their admiring friends that they had been present, something to give them a distinction which presumably they could none of them gain in any healthy way.

The whole episode belongs to the sorrier aspects of American life. It goes to prove that despite our vaunted civilization there are still many seemingly decent, kindly folk in whom the aboriginal savage lies very close to the surface.

People came not only from the immediate vicinity but from distant places to participate in this foul orgy. To make sure that they would miss no detail many of the spectators took their places around the scaffold many hours before the time set for the execution. Not the least disgusting aspect of this saturnalia of sadism was the presence in the crowd of women, some with babes in their arms, of boys and girls—over 10,000 spectators in all.

In most parts of the United States public executions have long since been barred. The need for eliminating all exceptions to this rule has now been demonstrated. It is a disgrace to the entire Nation that such barbaric occurrences as the one at Owensboro are not merely possible, but actually prescribed by law.

Coughlin For Coughlin.

In at least one respect the Cleveland convention of the National Union for Social Justice is rendering a useful service. It is helping to explain the phenomenon of Coughlinism.

After the recent Townsend convention Utopian crusaders of many varieties indulged in a love feast in honor of Representative Lemke, Union Party candidate for President. In him they found a torchbearer willing to throw his radiance over panaceas of many varieties. Why should not all the advocates of wealth sharing, rabble rousing, munificent pensions and free beer join hands in driving the money changers from Wall Street and the New Deal from Washington? It was a magnificent thought until the leaders reflected on its implications.

Now that this has happened, a distinct cooling to the whole idea of a united Utopian front may be detected. Coughlin says he still intends to vote for Lemke, but each of the four points in the program he will present the convention emphasizes the fact that the Union for Social Justice must always retain as its first objective the glorification of himself. It must retain its own identity, stand by Coughlin's conception of social justice, refrain from merging with any other agency, and adopt no political party.

This, of course, is natural and shows the radio priest to be a very shrewd fellow where his own interests are concerned. Coughlin gladly used the Townsend convention as a sounding board, and he is willing to let the California doctor, the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, Senator Rush Holt and what-have-you, all blow his horn at Cleveland. But after all, the real purpose of his union is to enhance the prestige and potential powers of Charles E. Coughlin himself.

In the recent Congressional investigation the O. A. R. P. was clearly shown to be a racket intended to line the pockets of its promoters. Coughlin's line is less mercenary than Dr. Townsend's conquest of the gullible. But what it lacks in commercialism is certainly made up in the subtle bid for personal aggrandizement. Not under any circumstances is Coughlin going to consent to become the tail of Candidate Lemke's kite.

If the ardent followers of shrewd demagogues could see through the motives by which the latter are actuated, there would be few requests for $1 rooms for transients in Cleveland this week. But we are in a hero-worshipping age. And the tactics followed by Hitler and Mussolini have not been wasted on their would-be American imitators.

Discredited In Advance.

It was a foregone conclusion that a system of agricultural production control based upon control of acreage would prove a failure. The only uncertainty concerned the date of its abandonment. Two severe droughts have not only emphasized the undependability of the methods of control introduced by the AAA but have brought a widespread realization of their positive dangers.

At present a heated argument is going on between Secretary Wallace and his critics as to the part played by acreage reduction in accentuating current shortages of important crops. It should, of course, be conceded that acreage restrictions are not the cause of our having one of the shortest corn crops in 55 years. Moreover, as Secretary Wallace points out, the acreage planted in both wheat and corn this year has been above average. With normal weather, he says, we might have had a surplus for export, with prices 20 or 30 per cent lower. But such surmises merely call attention to the fact that the old AAA program was a gamble with chance and the weather, not a program that could be relied upon.

Moreover, the present soil conservation act requires a reduction in the area planted in "soil-depleting" crops by farmers trying to qualify for benefit payments. That is a system which will have unfortunate results in a year of extensive crop failures, even if it does not cut down corn and wheat acreage. Secretary Wallace admits that farmers have reduced plantings of oats, barley, rye and other feed grains to meet AAA requirements, thereby greatly aggravating a severe shortage of such crops. Envisaging the prospects of a large acreage planted in wheat and corn during the coming year, the Secretary is now turning his thoughts toward the question of control of possible agricultural surpluses. That may be regarded by some of his detractors as a clever way of confounding his critics, but it is in accordance with plans tentatively outlined before the old AAA was outlawed.

The so-called "ever-normal granary" is intended as a device for correcting the unavoidable errors of an agricultural adjustment program. In 1934 for example, Secretary Wallace said that any program for bringing wheat production nearer to domestic requirements would need to be coupled with adequate protection against crop failure. He added that the drought of that year suggested the "necessity of future protection against crop failures in a continuous program of production control." Then, as now, the Secretary was looking forward to years of bumper crops when, he thought, surpluses would have to be stored in order to prevent sharp declines in prices.

Thus it will be seen that the Wallace program really calls for an extension of Government control over supplies, with a view to keeping up the prices paid farmers for their products. But this ever-normal granary plan is as unsound in theory as the Farm Board method of surplus control. It mistakenly assumes that supplies withdrawn from the market will not have a depressing effect upon prices paid for farm crops. It minimizes the political obstacles to sale of a surplus and the pressure to accumulate such surpluses as a means of raising prices momentarily.

The costs of such a system and the possibilities of loss to taxpayers are indicated by the disastrous experiences of the Farm Board. Yet if Secretary Wallace has his way, the lessons taught by that abortive attempt to raise farm prices will be ignored. And another equally dangerous experiment of the same type may be launched in the vain hope of achieving stability in farm prices and equalizing marketable supplies of farm products over a period of years.

Slavery In Arkansas?

In presenting to a grand jury the results of its thorough investigation into "peonage" in Arkansas, the Department of Justice is striking at one of the weakest spots in our entire economic system. The poverty and wretched living conditions of many tenant farmers in the South are well known. If their deplorable situation is aggravated by forced labor for payment of debts, the Government cannot too vigorously crack down upon what is in effect a type of slavery.

Quite properly, however, the Department of Justice is taking precautions to avoid a mere crusade that might run beyond its legal authority. The Federal law forbidding "the holding of any person to service or labor under the system known as peonage" dates back to 1867. It provides a fine of not more than $5,000 and not more than five years' imprisonment for any one who holds, arrests or returns a person to involuntary labor to liquidate a debt. The statute has seldom been applied, but the Department of Justice obviously thinks it may be used against some modern slave drivers of the cotton belt.

Instead of rushing forward with a spectacular fight against the 1936 peonage system, the department will merely lay its "conflicting" evidence before the grand jury. If indictments are brought in, test cases will certainly be carried to the courts. But any concerted action awaits ascertainment of the extent to which the peonage abolition act is applicable to modern practices. By taking that judicious attitude the department has placed itself above criticism.

The mere fact that the Government has interested itself in the abuse of ignorant and helpless tenants will have a salutary effect. The country is all too familiar with the manner in which unscrupulous landlords extend credit to destitute sharecroppers, and—by charging excessive prices at plantation stores and allowing small returns for crops produced—keep them working year after year to pay their debts. Now it is alleged that tenants have been arrested as vagrants and forced to work off their debts.

Even though the applicability of the Federal statute may not be absolutely clear, vigorous prosecution of these cases is certainly warranted. Slavery is no more tolerable when imposed for debt than for any other reason. If the alleged subjection of tenants to peonage is substantiated by evidence in the hands of the Department of Justice, and the law should prove inadequate to stamp out the practice, Congress will undoubtedly take the matter up when it reconvenes in January.

No Sense Of Humor.

The human race has long since learned to distrust the motives of individuals who come bearing gifts when they are really seeking favors. And politicians promising tax reductions just before election are not excepted.

It is, however, somewhat amazing that this old trick should be used over and over again. Repetition indicates confidence that the average citizen will never understand that he can not have lower taxes and enjoy subsidies, pensions, public improvements, etc., too. Yet the politicians are engaged in another scramble to distract attention from governmental debts by flashing before the taxpayer the tempting sweetness of tax reduction.

President Roosevelt's bubble of optimism over taxes had scarcely floated out of the White House conference when the Kansas State Tax Commission came forth with a lollypop for voters of that State. The implication is, of course, that if the Governor of Kansas is made President of the United States similar goodies will be available to every man, woman and child.

Kansas has a debt of $19,000,000 which eats up a substantial part of local revenue. Moreover, up to the end of 1935, the Federal Government had contributed nearly $40,000,000 for emergency relief in Kansas. Except for the desire to create an illusion of reduced governmental costs, Kansas authorities might have profitably employed surplus funds from the existing tax rate for debt reduction, or for unemployment relief to cut down the unnatural burden upon the Federal Government. But the sunflower must not be outclassed.

Whether pre-election tax cuts and promises are accomplished by shifting obligations and ignoring urgent needs, or by conveniently forgetting a staggering deficit, they are not likely to deceive the public. Voters still have a sense of humor, even though politicians do not.

To Control Pedestrians.

The principal traffic problem in Washington is the pedestrian, according to Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer. If proof is needed, the statistics of last year's traffic deaths are at hand. Of 113 persons killed, 74 were pedestrians.

In 57 of the accidents in which they were involved, pedestrians were shown to be at fault. Thirty of them were not crossing at a crosswalk; eight were crossing at traffic-controlled intersections against the signal; eight stepped from behind parked automobiles; three were crossing the street between intersections; three were killed while playing in the street; and two were intoxicated.

In an attempt to reduce these totals, Mr. Van Duzer has proposed a new District regulation, which the Commissioners have referred to Corporation Counsel Seal, providing that "no pedestrian shall disobey the instructions of a police officer." At first glance this may appear almost too elementary an approach to the problem. Why not, it may be asked, make it illegal for pedestrians to cross streets against red traffic lights? The reply is that enforcement of such a regulation would be impossible with Washington's present small police personnel.

The new rule is only one step toward the control of pedestrians for their own safety. But it is a most important step. At present the police may not legally deter a man who dives headlong into a directed stream of traffic. Mr. Van Duzer's proposal will make it possible to arrest such recalcitrants as violators of the traffic law. And though only the main intersections can be policed this year, a few arrests at these crowded points should soon make some impression upon the jaywalkers who persist in endangering not only their own lives but also those of countless drivers forced to swerve and brake suddenly to avoid them.

Pay As You Go.

From the Middletown, Conn., Press.

Pay-as-you-go States are increasing—at least the news is flashed about the Nation that this and that State finished the latest fiscal year with balances. One thing, though, is missing in the reports—they fail to reveal to what extent the State has been aided by Federal contributions for relief.

It is a creditable revelation, the way States are aiming to keep down their debt and operate within revenue receipts. But it should also be kept in mind that wide differences have been revealed in the extent that relief aid has been rendered States and made such results possible.

It happens that South Carolina is the latest State in the news to report finishing the year with a balance, all of which is worth while and a move in the right direction.

Yet it should have been told that South Carolina is a moderate contributor to Federal revenue, while it is among the States most liberally aided from Washington for relief purposes.

The Rules Of The Game.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am writing to express vigorous disagreement with your editorial of August 12 entitled "Self-Styled Liberals" in which you attack the policies of John L. Lewis and Labor's Nonpartisan League.

You criticize Lewis because of his political tactics in supporting the re-election of President Roosevelt: in trading votes for concessions to labor. You also declare that Lewis is insincere in his liberal professions and suggest that if he truly desired a labor party he would join forces with the Socialists.

The trading of votes for concessions is the way the great game of American politics has always been played; and Lewis does nothing to merit blame in playing the game according to the rules. As for Lewis joining forces with the Socialists, it is evident that such an action would increase the possibility of a Republican victory—which Lewis has stated that he believes would be a calamity for labor and the Nation.

To think, however, that Lewis holds any illusions as to the quality of Rooseveltian liberalism is to be guilty of naivete! In entering the political arena Lewis is evidently seeking to weld out of labor an instrument for its own advancement and for the advancement of the cause of liberalism. Whether he will find it wise to remain within the Democratic Party or to desert it for a new Labor Party is a question for the future.

It is because of Lewis' realistic approach to the problem of gaining political power—which American liberals have long been facing—that "sincere third party advocates" look upon him with great interest and hope. It is quite legitimate for The Post to criticize Lewis' tactics and political strategy, but to charge him with insincerity in his professions of liberalism—in the light of his record as a labor progressive—is to make a distinctly unfair and untenable accusation.

Noise Complaints.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As you are the champion of us long-suffering, law-abiding citizens, I would ask what has become of the movement to suppress the useless noises? One of the best opportunities to observe the hideous, useless noises inflicted upon us is to live on Seventeenth street in the neighborhood between Q and S streets.

This street now serves as a cut-off from a feeder to some of its neighboring streets. It is very narrow and has a slight grade. Nearly every truck which passes from 5 in the morning on, runs with mufflers wide open, everybody toots violently and loudly, but never slackens speed. From midnight until the night clubs close, the happy ladies and gentlemen attending them are deposited by the dozens from violently tooting autos until at 3 a. m. the last celebrant is landed.

Why has our otherwise highly efficient, but too small police force, no authority to teach people who need it, a little consideration and rudimental decency and respect for the rights of others.

FRED ARBY.
Washington, Aug. 11.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can nothing be done about the simply maddening noise made by the Capital Transit buses? I live on a street where they are passing night and day and am almost distracted by the hideous racket they make. I don't believe it is necessary, either. I am quite sure that in New York City, for example, so much noise would not be tolerated. In fact, I have never heard anything like this din on any New York bus.

I should think indeed that this annoyance would definitely tend to depress real estate values wherever it prevails. I know of one couple, for example, who gave up their expensive and attractive apartment because they simply could not bear the bus racket, and that particular piece of property went down at once.

Religion Today.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of Mr. J. O. Knott in your issue of August 10 offers the consolation that rebellion against established church organizations does not necessarily mean a rebellion against religionists.

In my opinion there is a strong aversion at present and growing stronger daily on the part of intelligent people toward what might be termed world religion. By religion I mean that empty form of godliness and piety practiced by the people in buildings called churches. Jesus bitterly denounced this in his day and placed the responsibility directly upon the preachers or rabbis. There is a famine in the land, not for bread, but for hearing of the Word of Jehovah.

Pegler's Idea Of Reformers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. Pegler's "Eleanor Was Right" seems to have caused much resentment, but the article was to be expected from one of Pegler's school of thought, with a perverted idea of reform and reformers. He couldn't or wouldn't distinguish between liberty and license, nor care how either might affect the liberty of others.

To him all workers along religious or social lines wear tall hats tied with crepe and have warts on their noses. The black sheep represent the fold. However, wasn't the drinking phase of the Jarrett incident only secondary. Wasn't it because Mrs. Jarrett chose to break a rule, which she was in honor-bound to observe, that caused the reprimand? I am sure Mr. Pegler lost sight of this fact in his rush to defend Eleanor's "right" to drink when, where, and what she wants.

Surely America wants clean sports and sportsmanship, contestants willing to set side self-appraisals in a common loyalty to the rules of the game. JUST A LAYMAN.

Hotel Keys.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The entire country was shocked at the attack on and brutal murder of Helen Clevenger, recently, in an Asheville hotel, by one of the hotel employes. The murderer has confessed and swift justice will doubtless follow.

The point the writer would make is the fact that numerous keys to Miss Clevenger's room were scattered around the hotel in the possession of miscellaneous persons, according to information developed in the investigation. This should not have been so. A guest at a hotel is entitled to the fullest protection of the management and any extra keys to rooms should at all times be locked in the manager's safe. ALBERT S. A Century Of Peace.

Symbolical of more than 120 years of peace and friendship between two great countries, separated only by an invisible boundary line stretching 3,000 miles from the Atlantic to the Pacific, a bronze peace plaque was erected Tuesday at the intersection of the international border on the South Channel span of Roosevelt Bridge. The tablet was placed by the capital Kiwanis clubs of the two countries, Washington, D. C., and Ottawa, Ontario, and was formally unveiled and dedicated in the presence of Kiwanians from Montreal, Ottawa, Cornwall, Kingston, Ogdensburg, Malone and Watertown.

Kiwanis International has done, and is doing, a great work in promoting international goodwill. The erection of the tablet here was more than a mere gesture of friendship between widely separated clubs of the organization; it was the exemplification of the spirit underlying the entire Kiwanis movement.

The inscription reads:

"This unfortified boundary line between the Dominion of Canada and the United States of America should quicken the remembrance of the more than century old friendship between these countries—a lesson of peace to all nations."

There is no parallel in all history for the friendly relationship which has existed for so many years between Canada, a far-flung dominion of the British Empire with, but 10,000,000 population, and her powerful neighbor to the south, with more than 120,000,000 population. It has been a relationship founded upon mutual trust and understanding, upon a common language, common ideals and common customs. The people of the United States are not aliens, not foreigners; they are neighbors in the true sense of the term.

It is sometimes well to ponder upon the meaning of this international amity, this 3,000 mile boundary line without a fortress, a gun or soldier . . . and to thank God that it exists.

Townsendite Defeats And Victories.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial entitled "A Weak Showing," in The Post of August 13 could be supplemented by certain facts which your readers might like to know. These facts would make it easier for you in the future to determine the real reason for Townsendite defeats and victories.

First, many candidates have qualified and announced on Townsend plan slates who are not real Townsend adherents at heart. They have taken advantage of the popularity of the movement to try to get nominated. These have been refused support by Dr. Townsend and his real leaders, although they may have the local support of their State or area managers.

Second, Dr. Townsend is now cleaning house of all who do not believe in and follow the plan.

Third, Senator Borah is a friend of Dr. Townsend, who has promised to bring the Townsend plan before the United States Senate, and the Rev. Gerald Smith supported Borah's candidacy.

Gerald Smith stayed out of Arkansas, and there is no present Townsend organization of any size in that State as yet, hence Senator Joe Robinson and Utilities Leader Harvey Couch have the answers.

The two States in which Townsend organizations concentrated in the Tuesday primaries were Tennessee and Florida, and in both States victories were won.

Prior to this primary Dr. Townsend and the Rev. Mr. Smith visited Maine and captured two out of three congressional nominations, and three out of five in Florida. On the West Coast the majority will carry the Townsend banner.

You point to the defeat of Upton Sinclair's EPIC plan in California as an example of what happens "when Utopians capture a major party nomination." It was Dr. Townsend and his Townsendites who defeated Sinclair, and this is well known by the people, and admitted by the press there.

Gerald Smith made no speeches in Kansas, which is Republican, and no rabble-rousing talks were indulged in by Dr. Townsend, who had no organization in Kansas until recently. All of his candidates who received his support made very favorable showings considering they were Democrats.

Townsend victories means victory for the Supreme Court, the Constitution, private ownership of property and an end to foolish government. E. S. TAYLOR.

The Post Impressionist

Re Jesse James, Tyler, et al.

Post Office, Saturday.

AT ONE time or another, this Column has had something to say about a curious contradiction in certain modern minds. We refer to those realistic souls who most loudly deny ancient evidence of immortality, and then robustly swallow (on the recommendation of what is practically no evidence at all) any current story denying the death and burial of any prominent personage of later date.

How they aver that Louis XVII lived long in Wisconsin, Marshal Ney in North Carolina. How Oscar Wilde and the commander of the Titanic are still clinging to a sequestered mundane existence.

Well, now it's Jesse James.

Of course, there was for a long while a story which whispered of James' escape from the fate that the records assign him. However, it sagged badly. Only in very recent days has it come up again.

From San Antonio, Tex., P. V. Murray sends us, in this connection, an interesting relic in three reels.

"Starting Monday—Unbelievable, but True—JESSE JAMES, Notorious Outlaw, ALIVE—IN PERSON!

"Jesse James, the famous Clay County, Mo., bandit, supposedly shot by Bob Ford on April 3, 1882 (for $10,000 reward), has reappeared after 51 years of hiding and is rapidly establishing his identity to a disbelieving world.

"JESSE JAMES will pay $5,000 REWARD to any man, woman or child who can prove that he is not the original Missouri outlaw. He invites all old-time residents to meet him personally and discuss old times."

Reel II is a newspaper photograph of a benevolent, aged gentleman under a two-gallon sombrero. He has longish white hair and a face heavily lined along its lower strata, but (one gathers) no teeth.

He is represented as drawing a hefty revolver from a studded holster—or restoring it to the holster. Below this picture there appear these cut-lines:

Reel III seems to supply Mr. James-Williams with another alias—that of Howard. For Reel III is a clipping from the San Antonio Light.

"The elusive Mr. Howard, or Jesse James to youse guys"—says the Light—"will be here on Monday, pistol and all, to tell you that he is really the Missouri Robin Hood, and to pan our modern Dillingers and Karpises . . . four times daily.

"Jim Williams, as he says he has been known for many years, will tell audiences that on that celebrated occasion when he was hanging pictures, Cousin Bob didn't really shoot him in the back, but another fellow, who was laid out and identified as the original Jesse. And that he (Jesse himself) galloped away on a horse for distant parts.

"Williams says he has been living a quiet life in the oil fields and the race tracks."

Well, have it any way you want to. For our own part, however, although we should like to hear from his own lips, the story of Mr. Jim Williams Howard Jesse James' exploits in the days when a bandit was a real bandit, we'd much more like to get his recipe for a quiet life in the oil fields or on the race track.

All of which recalls another old-timer, an older old-timer and a very different type of old-timer.

You may remember our careless column on the language of the White House. We mourned its deterioration from the Grand Manner, and, as an example of that Grand Manner, we quoted from a certain letter written by the tenth Chief Executive of these United States. We referred to that letter as a model.

Now, in the midst of it there was one fly. We hoped that President Tyler might get away with it—but we feared that somebody would catch him.

And somebody has caught him!

Lawyer Joseph L. Cavenaugh is the Nimrod. He writes us:

"Referring to your column on the Decline of Presidential English, it is extremely doubtful, to my mind, whether either President Roosevelt or Gov. Landon would employ such grammar as 'There lies . . . the two Secretaries.'"

They wouldn't, Mr. Cavenaugh. But don't think that we did—or that The Post's composing room or proof room did. We protest that the fault doesn't militate against the argument we were making in favor of a higher-sounding English than present Presidents give us; but we insist that the fault now in question was committed, just the same, by President John Tyler.

And we respectfully refer you to page 9, No. 1, Vol. XVIII of "Tyler's Quarterly Historical and Genealogical Magazine," Richmond, Va., July, 1936.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler.

'Spit On Freedom?'

It amuses me to hear our friends the Republicans holler and carry on about President Roosevelt's extravagance and the tax burden which he is building up for posterity, because if they were to elect their man tomorrow he would have to go right ahead with the extravagance and the debt or face a revolution.

Rather than provoke the revolution Mr. Landon would continue to toss the money around, although, for the sake of appearances, he would feel bound to cancel some of Mr. Roosevelt's schemes and substitute others of his own just as expensive.

Up to now Mr. Landon has revealed no definite plan by which he as President would shut off the national Government's assistance to the people, but that isn't to be wondered at, because there is no way short of strict fascism, which he, naturally, cannot propose in open meeting at this stage of the game.

True, Hearst has been playing footie with Mussolini and Hitler in persistent plugs for dictatorship in other countries in such a way as to suggest that it might be a good thing for us. But Hearst doesn't speak officially for Landon, and, anyway, you can bet that if he got what he is crying for he wouldn't like it.

Because under fascism a lot of Republican gang politicians would step in and run his business for him and make him absorb more employes than he normally uses. And they would soon have him screaming "Murder!" with their special taxes and forced contributions to support the unemployed in public improvements no different from Roosevelt's and in semimilitary organizations of Government tough guys.

• • • •

Landon might try to feed the money to business with the intention that it should reach the people through the pay rolls of private industry instead of shoving it directly to the unemployed through Government work. But that wouldn't work as well as Roosevelt's way.

Private industry would chisel too much off the top, just as the big cotton planters gypped the share-croppers under Roosevelt and set them out on the road with their ragged little kids and scabby dogs. The big planters could get away with that because the sharecroppers are scattered and weak and ignorant and the Negro question operates against both white and Negro peons.

In the big industrial centers, where the help is concentrated in masses, there would be hell to pay. City workmen are smarter and more truculent, and it isn't possible to tar and feather labor organizers and agitators and run them out of town, as happened in Arkansas.

Our friends the Republicans are right in one important and very ominous contention. They insist that Roosevelt doesn't have a plan, and the obvious truth is that he hasn't—worse luck. He is just going along on a week-to-week basis, maintaining the capitalistic democratic system by gradual concessions to the people and hoping that after four more years things will come right somehow. But he doesn't foresee a solution, and his next term will just defer the blowoff four years more.

By that time a lot of us will be dead, and the rest of the country will have been slowly prepared for some tough mug who will take over as President-Dictator and rattle our teeth with direct methods.

• • • •

It is too bad that the liberities of the American system can't be preserved, but they will have to go, because our democracy is just an innocent bystander, in the row and hasn't the belly for a fight or a leader to remind the people what freedom means. The poor old American system will stop a lot of punches and half-bricks thrown from both sides and will be trampled flat in the scuffle.

Right now I get hundreds of letters from people who want to "spit on freedom," as the Germans say, and destroy the liberities that Washington and Jefferson handed down to us—just for the pleasure of slugging a few individuals whom they don't like. We seldom hear a chirp from our democracy nowadays. The principals in the fight are communism and fascism, both of which detest freedom, and democracy is in the middle, being belted from both sides.

Sure, Roosevelt is extravagant and wasteful. He knows it. He might save a few hundred millions or a billion if he were of a mind to, but that wouldn't make much difference. He is throwing the lap robes and our coat and vest and pants to the wolves, and, like the Russian in the sleigh, he might have to toss out the old lady and the kids in the effort to distract them in the long dash to the settlement. But that's just the catch. There ain't no settlement.

Rain in Minnesota Halts Forest Fires

St. Paul, Aug. 14 (AP).—Rain checked scores of brush and timber blazes in Minnesota's forest fire area, easing tension of settlers in the north today.

Under cloudy skies buttressing meterologists' predictions of more showers tonight and possibly tomorrow, 10,000 fire fighters strengthened barriers designed to check the flames completely. Many of the crews were given much-needed rest.

The four major blazes—at McGrath, Tom Lake, Warroad and the Kabetogama District—were under control, Grover Conzet, State forester, announced. Settlers who moved out of the area north of Warroad yesterday when a Canadian fire threatened the isolated section, returned to their homes.

Gas Leak Fatal to Four.

Lincoln, Nebr., Aug. 14 (AP).—Frank Erion, of Chicago, insurance adjuster, today blamed a natural gas leak for the explosion which demolished a unit of the Grainger Bros. Wholesale Grocery Co. plant here Wednesday and killed four men.

Consumer Mutuals

Co-operatives Include Medical Care, Food, Gasoline And Newspapers; Minnesota Leads With 450 Retail Outlets.

This is the concluding article of a series discussing co-operatives in the United States.

By Herbert Plummer.
Associated Press Correspondent.

Consumer co-operatives in the United States render services to their members ranging from medical care to cheaper gas and oil for automobiles.

A community in Oklahoma operates its own hospital, the first of its kind in the country. Patronized by its owners and owned by its patrons, for $24 a year an entire family is entitled to hospitalization, including everything from a surgical operation to free room, board and nursing.

The Consumers' Co-operative Association of North Kansas City, Mo., one of the most extensive co-operative developments in the country, during June set an all-time record for a single month's business by handling 711 cars of refined petroleum products and 143,249 gallons of lubricating oils.

This association not only supplies its member groups with petroleum products, but makes shipments to co-operative societies in France and Scotland.

12 Newspapers Operating On Co-operative Plan.

Co-operative newspapers flourish in Minnesota and North Dakota. Officials here have a record of 12 in the two States.

There are perhaps 30 farmers' associations for supplying their members with electricity for light and power on a co-operative basis. Some associations have set up their own power plants. Others buy the current at wholesale from existing utility companies and use co-operative methods in the construction and upkeep of a system for distribution.

Formal and informal farmers' telephone systems operated on a co-operative basis are numerous in many rural sections. Some of these systems are complete with switchboard and trunk lines, others tie in with urban companies upon which they depend for switchboard service and long distance service. There are several thousand of these mutual companies.

Several associations have been formed by groups of co-operatives for furnishing auditing services. There is at least one co-operative for supplying local associations with management service.

Mutual Formed In 1863 Still Operating In 1935.

For many years farmers have banded in small and large groups for obtaining needed supplies. The earliest association for which the co-operative division of the Farm Credit Administration has information in its files was organized in 1863, at Riverhead, N. Y. This association has 55 members and reported a $25,000 business for 1934-35.

A second association at Fontana, Kans., was formed in 1872. During the depression years of the early seventies, hundreds of newly organized subordinate Granges directed their attention to co-operative buying. Among the Grange stores still active is one at North Jay, Maine, which had 340 members in 1934.

In no other State has the co-operative movement gained such headway as in Minnesota. There are about 450 co-operative retail outlets handling petroleum products alone in Minnesota and they sell about 9 per cent of the total gasoline in the State.

In the United States it is estimated there are approximately 2,500 co-operative oil associations.

Soviet Likely to Stage Plot Trial As a Political Lesson to Public

16 Accused of Conspiring With Trotsky to Face Court; Such Cases Are Usually Prosecuted in Secret; Zinovieva Defendant.

By Joseph H. Baird.

Copyright, 1936, by the United Press.

The Soviet public apparently is being prepared for another one of the sensational public trials by which the politbureau dramatizes political issues.

Last of these great exhibitions was in the summer of 1933 when three British engineers of the Metro-Vickers Company were placed on trial for sabotage. It was designed to show the Soviet public that delays in the "five-year plan" were due to the machinations of foreign enemies.

Now 16 members of the old "left opposition," the followers of Leon Trotsky, Joseph Stalin's arch enemy, are to face charges of counter-revolution, deadliest of all sins in the eyes of loyal Communists. The list of defendants include such historic figures and veteran Bolsheviks as Gregory Zinoviev, once head of the Third Internationale, and Leo Kamenev, once high in Communist councils. Both men were close friends of Communism's high priest, Nicolai Lenin. Both were of the "inner circle" which made the revolution. But both sided with Trotsky against Stalin in the epic fight between these giants for Lenin's mantle of power.

Lesson Is in Doubt.

Just what lesson the present trial is intended to plant in the minds of Soviet citizens is not quite clear. As the defendants are accused of plotting with Trotsky to overthrow Stalin's group, their trial and conviction might well drive home two points:

1. That in these tense times when Russia is threatened by Germany and Japan, every loyal Soviet citizen must be on guard against enemies of the regime who would menace the strength of the state.

2. That swift and sure punishment awaits those who dare to plot against Stalin.

Soviet political trials are almost invariably held in secret. When Zenoviev and Kamenev were tried and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in 1935 for being "ideological inspirers" of the "Leningrad center," a group accused of plotting the assassination of Sergei Kirov, the proceedings were shrouded in darkness.

Only through official communiques did the public know what happened. Hence, the announcement that the court sessions in this case will be open is significant. It indicates to observers of Soviet affairs that a lesson is to be driven home to the populace.

In one sense, the arrest of the 16 "leftists" may be viewed as another battle in the long, bitter war between Stalin and Trotsky. This strife has roots deep in Soviet history. Even so long ago as the civil war the two were "gunning" for each other. During the campaign in the south, Stalin, attached to Trotsky's forces, made numerous reports to the commissars in Moscow accusing Trotsky of military ineptness and inefficiency.

Politically, the issue between Stalin and Trotsky was whether socialism could be built in one country alone or whether it could develop only on the foundation of universal revolution.

Stalin held that the Communists should devote their whole attention to building up socialism in Russia, letting revolution abroad wait. Trotsky was ardently committed to a policy of overthrowing capitalism everywhere at the earliest possible moment. But the quarrel went deeper than that. The two men hated each other bitterly.

Eventually Stalin triumphed. He gained control of the politbureau, sent Trotsky into exile and crushed his followers at home, among them Zinoviev and Kamenen.

"Inspired" the Killing.

Presently they recanted their "heresy" and were taken again into the Communist fold. But never more were they trusted. Real power was kept from them.

For some years little was heard of Zinoviev and Kamenev, but they jumped suddenly into the spotlight again in January, 1935, when they were accused of plotting with enemies of the regime abroad and "inspiring" the death of both Kirov and Stalin.

The general impression in Russia at that time was that only their former friendship with Lenin saved them from a shooting squad. Now that they are to leave their cells and face charges of counter-revolution again, it is doubtful that they will be so lucky a second time. The "dictatorship of the proletariat" does not move without seeing its objective.

Fifteenth Of August

By William Lyon Phelps.

The Assumption.

The 15th of August is one of the great feasts of the Roman Catholic Church, having a fixed date like Christmas. Then is celebrated in every part of the world, wherever there are Catholics, the "Assumption" of the Blessed Virgin Mary, her ascent into Heaven and her coronation as queen. I shall never forget the first time I entered the Cathedral of Antwerp when I was a young man, and saw Ruben's painting of the Assumpion. I was quite aware that his picture of the "Descent From the Cross," in the same cathedral, was regarded as superior, but for some reason I was then more impressed by the "Assumption."

• • • •

Although I am not a Catholic, I always attend a Catholic Church on this day. Since 1923 the nearest Catholic Church to where I live in August is at Port Austin, Mich., eight and one-half miles from my home. I go to this church every year on that day to do honor to Our Lady. It should be remembered that the Catholics do not worship the Virgin Mary; they worship only God. But they venerate Mary and pray to her.

• • • •

Ian Maclaren (the Rev. Dr. John Watson), author of "Beside the Bonnie Briar Bush," said that he was once traveling in Europe, and entered an ancient cathedral. There was an old woman praying, and he knelt beside her. As they came out together, she asked "Are you a Catholic?" "No, madam." "Don't you ever pray to the Blessed Virgin?" "No, my dear." "Oh, sir, you are a man and perhaps cannot understand. I am a woman, and you cannot imagine what a comfort it is to have a woman to pray to!"

Men and women of all branches of spiritual faith might well venerate not only reverently but affectionately Our Lady.

President Roosevelt Decries Warfare in Chautauqua Speech

Good-Neighbor Policy Is Cited as Example to All Lands.

By the Associated Press.

Chautauqua, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Following is the text of President Roosevelt's speech:

As many of you who are here tonight know, I formed the excellent habit of coming to Chautauqua more than 20 years ago. After my inauguration in 1933, I promised Mr. Bestor that during the next four years I would come to Chautauqua again; it is in fulfillment of this that I am with you tonight.

A few days ago I was asked what the subject of this talk would be; and I replied that for two good reasons I wanted to discuss the subject of peace; first, because it is eminently appropriate in Chautauqua and, secondly, because in the hurly-burly of domestic politics it is important that our people should not overlook problems and issues which, though they lie beyond our borders, may, and probably will, have a vital influence on the United States of the future.

Many who have visited me in Washington in the past few months have been surprised when I have told them that personally and because of my own daily contacts with all manner of difficult situations I am more concerned and less cheerful about international world conditions than about our immediate domestic prospects.

I say this to you not as a confirmed pessimist, but as one who still hopes that envy, hatred and malice among nations have reached their peak and will be succeeded by a new tide of peace and good will. I say this as one who has participated in many of the decisions of peace and war before, during and after the World War—one who has traveled much and one who has spent a goodly portion of every 24 hours in the study of foreign relations.

Long before I returned to Washington as President of the United States, I had made up my mind that pending what might be called a more opportune moment on other continents, the United States could best serve the cause of a peaceful humanity by setting an example. That was why on the 4th of March, 1933, I made the following declaration:

"In the field of world policy I would dedicate this Nation to the policy of the good neighbor—the neighbor who resolutely respects himself and because he does so, respects the rights of others—the neighbor who respects his obligations and respects the sanctity of his agreements in and with a world of neighbors."

Neighbors in Practice.

This declaration represents my purpose; but it represents more than a purpose for it stands for a practice. To a measurable degree it has succeeded; the whole world now knows that the United States cherishes no predatory ambitions. We are strong; but less powerful nations know that they need not fear our strength. We seek no conquest; we stand for peace.

In the whole of the Western Hemisphere our good neighbor policy has produced results that are especially heartening.

The noblest monument to peace and to neighborly economic and social friendship in all the world is not a monument in bronze or stone, but the boundary which unites the United States and Canada—3,000 miles of friendship with no barbed wire, no gun or soldier, and no passport on the whole frontier.

Mutual trust made that frontier—to extend the same sort of mutual trust throughout the Americas is our aim.

The American republics to the south of us have been ready always to co-operate with the United States on a basis of equality and mutual respect, but before we inaugurated the good neighbor policy there was among them resentment and fear, because certain administrations in Washington had slighted their national pride and their sovereign rights.

In pursuance of the good neighbor policy and because in my younger days I had learned many lessons in the hard school of experience, I stated that the United States was opposed definitely to armed intervention.

We have negotiated a Pan-American convention embodying the principle of non-intervention. We have abandoned the Platt amendment, which gave us the right to intervene in the internal affairs of the Republic of Cuba. We have withdrawn American Marines from Haiti. We have signed a new treaty which places our relations with Panama on a mutually satisfactory basis. We have undertaken a series of trade agreements with other American countries to our mutual commercial profit. At the request of two neighboring republics I hope to give assistance in the final settlement of the last serious boundary dispute between any of the American nations.

Cites Peace in Americas.

Throughout the Americas the spirit of the good neighbor is a practical and living fact. The twenty-one American republics are not only living together in friendship and in peace; they are united in the determination so to remain.

To give substance to this determination a conference will meet on December 1, 1936, at the Capitol of our great southern neighbor, Argentina, and it is, I know, the hope of all chiefs of State of the Americas that this will result in measures which will banish wars forever from this vast portion of the earth.

Peace, like charity, begins at home; that is why we have begun at home. But peace in the Western World is not all that we seek.

It is our hope that knowledge of the practical application of the good neighbor policy in this hemisphere will be borne home to our neighbors across the seas.

For ourselves we are on good terms with them—terms in most cases of straightforward friendship, of peaceful understanding.

But, of necessity, we are deeply concerned about tendencies of recent years among many of the nations of other continents. It is a bitter experience to us when the spirit of agreements to which we are a party is not lived up to. It is an even more bitter experience for the whole company of nations to witness not only the spirit, but the letter of international agreements violated with impunity and without regard to the simple principles of honor. Permanent friendships between nations as between men can be sustained only by scrupulous respect for the pledged word.

In spite of all this we have sought steadfastly to assist international movements to prevent war. We co-operated to the bitter end—and it was a bitter end—in the work of the general disarmament conference. When it failed we sought a separate treaty to deal with the manufacture of arms and the international traffic in arms. That proposal also came to nothing. We participated again to the bitter end—in a conference to continue naval limitations, and when it became evident that no general treaty could be signed because of the objections of other nations, we concluded with Great Britain and France a conditional treaty of qualitative limitations which, much to my regret, already shows signs of ineffectiveness.

We shun political commitments which might entangle us in foreign wars; we avoid connection with the political activities of the League of Nations; but I am glad to say that we have co-operated wholeheartedly in the social and humanitarian work at Geneva. Thus we are a part of the world effort to control traffic in narcotics, to improve international health, to help child welfare, to eliminate double taxation and to better working conditions and laboring hours throughout the world.

War Isolationists Only

We are not isolationists except insofar as we seek to isolate ourselves completely from war. Yet we must remember that so long as war exists on earth there will be some danger that even the nation which most ardently desires peace may be drawn into war.

I have seen war. I have seen war on land and sea. I have seen blood running from the wounded. I have seen men coughing out their gassed lungs. I have seen the dead in the mud. I have seen cities destroyed. I have seen 200 limping, exhausted men come out of line—the survivors of a regiment of 1,000 that went forward 48 hours before. I have seen children starving. I have seen the agony of mothers and wives. I hate war.

I have passed unnumbered hours, I shall pass unnumbered hours, thinking and planning how war may be kept from this Nation.

I wish I could keep war from all nations; but that is beyond my power. I can at least make certain that no act of the United States helps to produce or to promote war. I can at least make clear that the conscience of America revolts against war and that any nation which provokes war forfeits the sympathy of the people of the United States.

Many causes produce war. There are ancient hatreds, turbulent frontiers, the "legacy of old forgotten, far off things, and battles long ago." There are new-born fanaticisms, convictions on the part of certain peoples that they have become the unique depositories of ultimate truth and right.

A dark old world was devastated by wars between conflicting religions. A dark modern world faces wars between conflicting economic and political fanaticisms in which are intertwined race hatreds. To bring it home, it is as if within the territorial limits of the United States, 48 nations with 48 forms of government, 48 customs barriers, 48 languages were spending their time and their substance in a frenzy of effort to make themselves strong enough to conquer their neighbors or strong enough to defend themselves against their neighbors.

'Outlets Being Found.'

In one field, that of economic barriers, the American policy may be, I hope, of some assistance in discouraging the economic source of war and therefore a contribution toward the peace of the world. The trade agreements which we are making are not only finding outlets for the products of American fields and American factories but are also pointing the way to the elimination of embargoes, quotas and other devices which place such pressure on nations not possessing great natural resources that to them the price of peace seems less terrible than the price of war.

We do not maintain that a more liberal international trade will stop war, but we fear that without a more liberal international trade war is a natural sequence.

The Congress of the United States has given me certain authority to provide safeguards of American neutrality in case of war.

The President of the United States, who, under our Constitution, is vested with primary authority to conduct our international relations, thus has been given new weapons with which to maintain our neutrality.

Nevertheless—and I speak from a long experience—the effective maintenance of American neutrality depends today, as in the past, on the wisdom and determination of whoever at the moment occupy the offices of President and Secretary of State.

It is clear that our present policy and the measures passed by the Congress would in the event of a war on some other continent, reduce war profits which would otherwise accrue to American citizens. Industrial and agricultural production for a war market may give immense fortunes to a few men, for the Nation as a whole it produces disaster. It was the prospect of war profits that made our farmers in the West plow up prairie land that should never have been plowed, but should have been left for grazing cattle. Today we are reaping the harvest of those war profits in the dust storms which have devastated those war-plowed areas.

It was the prospect of war profits that caused the extension of monopoly and unjustified expansion of industry and a price level so high that the normal relationship between debtor and creditor was destroyed.

Nevertheless, if war should break out again in another continent, let us not blink the fact that we would find in this country thousands of Americans who, seeking immediate riches—fool's gold—would attempt to break down or evade our neutrality.

They would tell you—and, unfortunately, their views would get wide publicity—that if they could produce and ship this and that and the other article to belligerant nations, the unemployed of America would all find work. They would tell you that if they could extend credit to warring nations that credit would be used in the United States to build homes and factories and pay our debts. They would tell you that America once more would capture the trade of the world.

Duty to Stem Profiting.

It would be hard to resist that clamor; it would be hard for many Americans, I fear, to look beyond—to realize the inevitable penalties, the inevitable day of reckoning that comes from a false prosperity. To resist the clamor of that greed, if war should come, would require the unswerving support of all Americans who love peace.

If we face the choice of profits or peace, the Nation will answer—must answer—"We choose peace!" It is the duty of all of us to encourage such a body of public opinion in this country that the answer will be clear and for all practical purposes unanimous.

With that wise and experienced man who is our Secretary of State, whose statesmanship has met with such wide approval, I have thought and worked hard and long on the problem of keeping the United States at peace. But all the wisdom of America is not to be found in the White House or in the Department of State. We need the meditation, the prayer and the positive support of the people of America who go along with us in seeking peace.

No matter how well we are supported by neutrality legislation, we must remember that no laws can be provided to cover every contingency, for it is impossible to imagine how every future event may shape itself. In spite of every possible forethought, international relations involve of necessity a vast uncharted area. In that area safe sailing will depend on the knowledge and the experience and the wisdom of those who direct our foreign policy. Peace will depend on their day-to-day decisions.

Errors of Past Apparent.

At this late date, with the wisdom which is so easy after the event and so difficult before the event, we find it possible to trace the tragic series of small decisions which led Europe into the great war in 1914 and eventually engulfed us and many other nations.

We can keep out of war if those who watch and decide have a sufficient detailed understanding of international affairs to make certain that the small decisions of each day do not lead toward war, and if, at the same time, they possess the courage to say "no" to those who selfishly or unwisely would let us go to war.

Of all the nations of the world today we are in many ways most singularly blessed. Our closest neighbors are good neighbors. If there are remoter nations that wish us not good but ill, they know that we are strong; they know that we can and will defend ourselves and defend our neighborhood.

We seek to dominate no other nation. We ask no territorial expansion. We oppose imperialism. We desire reduction in world armaments.

We believe in democracy; we believe in freedom; we believe in peace. We offer to every nation of the world the handclasp of the good neighbor. Let those who wish our friendship look us in the eye and take our hand.

Speaks at Cleveland.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 14 (AP).—In an informal address on an old car ferry anchored in Lake Erie, President Roosevelt told 400 luncheon guests of the Great Lakes Exposition the people of America are entitled to a good time after what they have been through in recent years.

The President said Cleveland, through its exposition was performing a real service to the Nation in promoting better national understanding and solidarity.

Turning to his inspection trip of Eastern flood areas, Mr. Roosevelt asserted he was "especially interested in seeking work caused not by depression, not by man, but by what we used to call an act of God."

He said that by seeing flood and drought areas first hand he could perform a better service in Washington.

The President made a motor trip to two Federal WPA projects, at the city airport and at a boulevard along the lake. Thousands of persons gave the Chief Executive a huge ovation. Multi-colored bits of paper and serpentine fluttered down from business and office buildings.

Study Opened On U. S. Levies By Tax Experts

While Republicans were describing as "politics" the Administration promise that there would be no increase in Federal taxes, Congressional tax experts yesterday began a study of the Government's complicated levies.

It is expected that a report looking to the clarification of the tax structure and possibly to the elimination of some taxes will be ready in December before the opening of the Seventy-fifth Congress in January. The study is being made by a staff of 13 experts under the direction of Lovell H. Parker, who has aided for many years in the drafting of tax bills.

Meanwhile, the Associated Press reported from San Francisco that John Hamilton, Republican national chairman, described the promise of no tax increase as "a laugh."

"Look Out for Years to Come."

Hamilton said the only comment he had was "in the words of Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, "'There may be no new taxes this year or the year after, but, oh boy, look out for the years to come.'"

Harrison E. Spangler, vice chairman of the Republican National Committee, said the public could put no reliance on such promises.

He said:

"The same President who is now so thoroughly concerned about the welfare of the taxpayers asked Congress last spring for $1,500,000,000 to spend as he pleased.

"It will be remembered that the President's budget which is supposed to reflect the Government's financial condition shows that, if by any chance Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected, he will ask Congress for another huge blank check next January.

"What is the answer? There is only one. Inflation.

"The taxpayers are doomed to pay and pay if the ruinous spending is not stopped.

"The New Dealers are attempting to lull the country into a sense of security, as they have many times before. The American people, however, can place no more reliance upon these new assurances than upon the old ones already thoroughly discredited."

Gray Ladies' Leader Weds On Sept. 16

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

A wedding of wide interest will be that which will take place in the Chapel of Walter Reed Hospital, September 16, when Miss Mary Edith Donnelly, one of the original Gray Ladies, becomes the bride of Lieut. Col. John William Meehan, executive officer of the hospital.

The bride, who is the daughter of the late Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Richard J. Donnelly, will be given in marriage by a fellow officer of her father, Gen. Arthur Winton Brown, Judge Advocate General of the United States Army. Gen. Brown and her father went overseas together from Camp Dix during the World War, attached to the headquarters of the Seventy-eighth Division. Her only attendant will be the daughter of the bridegroom, Miss Ruth Meehan, and the bridegroom's son, Mr. William Meehan, jr., will serve as best man.

Officers on duty at the hospital will act as ushers. They will be Col. Henry Coburn, Col. James C. Magee, Col. Royal Reynolds, and Capt. Clifford H. Ferry. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Lawrence J. Sheehan, of St. Patrick's Church, with which the bride's family has been affiliated for several generations. Chaplain Ryan, of Walter Reed Chapel, will assist in the service.

The bride chose the chapel as the scene of her wedding, as it has been one of her chief interests for a number of years as a member of the Gray Ladies. Through her efforts, permission was granted by the Catholic Church for its communicants to use the chapel. Her father gave a memorial there.

Her family has been prominently identified with the District for several generations. Her mother was the former Miss Elizabeth McLaughlin. Miss Donnelly is a past president of the American Women's Legion, and its present vice president, and is a member of the Agnes Scott College Club. She was a member of the first class of Gray Ladies organized at Walter Reed Hospital and has been active in the society ever since.

Lieut. Col. Meehan has been here for the last two years serving at his present post. He was also here from 1926 to 1930 as executive officer and instructor in the Army Medical School. His home is in York, Nebr.

A breakfast at the headquarters administration building at the Army Medical Center will follow the marriage ceremony.

Stimsons Off For Scotland

Former Secretary Planning to Shoot Grouse, Lindsay Sails.

The former Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stimson, who have been at their estate, Woodley, on Cathedral avenue, part of the summer, have sailed from New York on the Queen Mary. They will go direct to Scotland, where the former Secretary of State expects to shoot grouse and not even read a paper about politics, he says.

But there probably will be some political talk on the Queen Mary, for a fellow passenger is former Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg, author of the Kellogg pact, who is going to Europe for a vacation. Although he is in his eightieth year he intends to return in time to make speeches for Gov. Landon, Republican candidate for President.

On the ship is the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, who declared when he sailed he was not going to work nor even to shoot grouse but was going solely for a holiday.

In the meantime, the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, when they are in Washington, will enjoy the garden at Woodley as they have been invited to be there as much as they can while the Stimsons are away. It is in the gardens there that croquet matches are held in which the Secretary and Mrs. Hull and other distinguished Washingtonians often participate.

Miss Janet Fish Visits in Newport

Nurses' Head at Emergency on Vacation.

Miss Janet Fish, superintendent of nurses of the Washington Emergency Hospital, has gone to Newport to spend her vacation. Miss Fish, distinguished in the nursing profession, is a member of the Hamilton Fish family, of New York. She was one of the popular belles of Washington and New York and the summer colony in Newport in the days before she took up nursing as a profession.

Miss Fish made her debut in Washington and is a popular dinner guest in the Capital.

Miss Fish will remain in Newport until October, when she will go to New York for a short time before returning to Washington.

Democratic Council Will Gather Monday

The Democratic Women's National Council has issued invitations for a "spelling bee" on the New Deal "alphabet" Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the Washington Hotel. Representatives from 18 New Deal agencies will form the "spelling class" and Mrs. Louise Lazell will be the "teacher."

Mrs. Lazell, a member of the staff of the Democratic Digest, has been the director of the course of classes on government recently conducted by the council on Thursday evenings at the All States Hotel.

Larz Anderson, diplomat, scholar and world traveler, will observe his birthday today at Weld, the Anderson country home near Boston.

Strange to say, Mr. Anderson had eight cousins, all of whom were named Larz. He is related to the family of the late Speaker Nicholas Longworth through the marriage of Speaker Longworth's great aunt, Catherine Longworth, to Larz Anderson, of Kentucky. Countess de Chambrun in her book, "The Making of Nicholas Longworth," refers to this fact.

Mr. Larz Anderson, of Washington and Boston, served as Minister to Belgium and as United States Ambassador to Japan. He has been decorated by the governments of Italy, Japan and Belgium.

It would be interesting to calculate how many hundred rows of knitting Mrs. Roosevelt accomplishes in a year. She always has her knitting with her when she is on a motor trip, and frequently picks it up while she is waiting for a train, an engagement, when she is talking to friends or listening to a speech.

In this, it seems, she is not so different from Mrs. Landon, who also is a knitter. In fact, she is not different in this regard from many recent First Ladies. Mrs. Hoover was an indefatigable knitter, and, even as Mrs. Roosevelt, knitted many tiny garments for her grandchildren and the children of friends. In some respects it was a holdover from World War days, when everyone knitted. Mrs. Coolidge knitted her own sweaters, one or two for her husband and made many knitted presents for friends. Mrs. Hoover left some other samples of her handiwork in the White House, it is said, including some crochet edging on certain linen pillow cases.

Mrs. William Fitch Kelly, who went to Chicago to hear Col. Frank Knox make his speech of acceptance for the Vice Presidential nomination, is now in Lake Geneva, Wis., where she is visiting her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Graham Kelly. While there she is doing a great deal of sketching, for the Republican woman leader is an artist of recognized ability.

Mrs. Kelly has also made a success of sculpturing little statuettes in her quaint studio in Bethesda, Md., which once was an old church. It has been restored by Mrs. Kelly to its 200-year-old beauty and fitted up as a workshop. When her husband was consul general to Italy, Mrs. Kelly spent much time in the art galleries of Rome and Florence and visited Greece and studied its art treasures. Then she took up art as an avocation and studied under the famous Bourdelle.

Letters from New Orleans are filled with the gay doings of Eleanor and Curtis Dall, grandchildren of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, who have been visiting there with their father, Mr. Curtis B. Dall.

They went from New Orleans to Nashville, Tenn., where they will remain for some days, after which they will be taken by their father to New York, where they will rejoin their stepfather and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger, the latter the daughter of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, who will take them to their country place in Maine.

According to reports, the Dall youngsters enjoyed most, Pass Christian, the famous old resort near New Orleans where they were the guests of Mr. Willis Wilmot and where they passed some time on the Wilmot yacht, Moheja.

There was a considerable gallery at the huge swimming pool of the New Orleans Country Club when the Roosevelt grandchildren went in. Mr. Dall entertained at a swimming party there last Thursday for his children and they voted it quite the best party of the trip, it was said.

Master Herbert Vogel, jr., who was here with his parents, Capt. and Mrs. Vogel, lately of Fort Leavenworth, inadvertently gave his father considerable explaining to do during his stay in the capital. Herbert was having his hair cut the other day while his father waited. The barber was friendly and Herbert not averse to talking. "We're just visiting in Washington, on our way to Hawaii," he explained. "Where did you come from?" asked the barber as the scissors clicked.

"Oh, we came from Kansas, you see my father just got out of Leavenworth," said Herbert cheerfully.

The scissors paused. Capt. Vogel, who had taken little interest in the conversation up to that point, was suddenly aware it was time to have a part in it. He explained to the startled tonsorial artist that his term of service had been at Fort Leavenworth and not at the Federal penitentiary.

Marine Band To Entertain Here Sept. 10

Concert Is Arranged by Pan-American Union Head.

Mexican Tenor Will Be Concert Program Guest in Aztec Gardens.

The director general of the Pan-American Union, Dr. L. S. Rowe, has issued invitations for a concert of Latin American music, to be given in the Aztec Gardens of the Union the evening of September 10 by the United States Marine Band, with Capt. Taylor Branson conducting and Francisco Tortolero, Mexican tenor, assisting artist.

This will be the eighty-first in the series of such concerts presented under the auspices of the Pan-American Uion.

When they began in 1924, the concerts were presented in the patio, or small interior courtyard, with a handful of guests seated on the marble stairs leading from the front vestibule to the second floor of the building and on the balcony overlooking the Hall of the Americas. The setting, with the majestic royal palms and other tropical foliage, as well as the colorful macaws, was appropriate but, for fear of giving radio listeners an impression that the shrill cries of the birds were the notes of some unusual Latin American musical instrument, the macaws were removed from the patio during each program.

The concerts soon became so popular that they outgrew the limited facilities of the patio. For some years they have been given during the summer on the esplanade of the building, overlooking the beautiful Aztec Gardens, while the indoor concert April 14 each year, in honor of Pan-American Day, is presented in the Hall of the Americas. The summer concerts are scheduled during the period of the full moon. Flags of the 21 American republics placed against the annex, and the tall poplars swaying in the breeze, form the setting for the musicians and members of the audience in their summer evening gowns and linens and flannels.

Distinguished members of diplomatic and official Washington always are present at the concerts and many who were out of town when the midsummer program was given will be here for the coming one.

The works of composers of all the Latin American countries are featured on the programs and more than 75 Latin American guest artists have been presented.

In the presentation of the concerts the Pan-American Union has had the co-operation of the leaders and personnel of the three service bands stationed in Washington: the Army Band, under Capt. Thomas F. Darcy; the Navy Band, with Lieut. Charles Benter conducting, and the Marine Band, under the leadership of Capt. Branson. Each presents a band concert during the summer and they have combined to form the United Service Orchestra for the program in honor of Pan-American Day.

Suits, From Spectator Sports to Semi-Formal Dinner Wear, Prevail for the New Season

Variety of Blouses Needed For Fall-Winter Wardrobe

Sweater-Blouse Popular and Suitable for Business, General Wear or Even College if Chosen Wisely.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

IT IS GOING to be a suit season! In my recent survey of the New York markets, suits were shown by all of the manufacturers and exploited as one of the highlights of the fall and winter seasons. Suits of strictly spectator sports types, suits tailored and conservative, suits for afternoon dress-up occasions and semi-formal dinner suits for evening—all shown with reference to their adaptability to timely wearing characteristics.

Suits mean blouses are fashion news. And to make one suit serve for any and all occasions, there will need to be numerous blouses in the wardrobe. For the shopper on a strict budget, who can afford only one suit, it is wise to purchase with discrimination and select a suit of good quality material, well-tailored that includes the latest trends of the mode in its styling, and yet is conservative enough to be versatile. And this is where the blouse works overtime in giving the illusion of many costumes.

For business, the blouse may be one of the very swank weskits (an adaptation of a man's vest); a chic tailored cire satin; silk crepe whose sleeve treatment and neckline repeat the style details of smart frocks; or a velvet blouse noted for smart simplicity.

Blouses for the college miss, while more casual, are nevertheless clever and in keeping with the chic of the new suits. Sports shirts of plaid wool, reminiscent of the lumberjack influence, are popular this season in gay color combinations. Velveteen blouses reflecting the period influences of the mode are the newest adaptations of the old over-blouse idea. The sweater-blouse is much to the fore and is as suitable for business or general wear as it is for college if chosen wisely. With the newest sweaters fashioned exactly like blouses and in all of the season's high-fashion colors, stylists predict a big season in this realm.

When shopping in a trim fall suit and expecting to go on later to cocktails and dinner, the blouse should be selected with great care. Such a blouse has been designed this year, far superior to other seasons. Satin or crepe matching in color the suit, is an excellent choice and considered the height of smartness; monotones are a season's dark horse that are taking the style world by storm. In this instance, contrast is gained by fabrics—such as, blouse, hat, gloves, bag and shoes, the same color as the suit, but each of a different material. It is a splendid chance to take advantage of the trend for combining shiny and dull surfaces!

Fits Down Over Skirt.

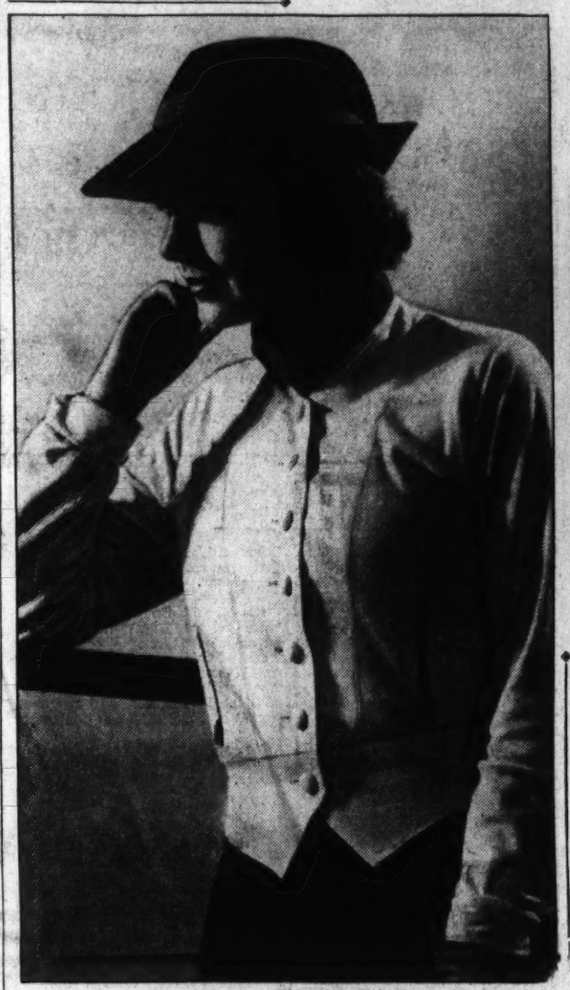
In previewing the fall blouses in the market, I was interested in the fact that they are designed to be an integral part of the suit—not an obvious necessity that is donned simply because a blouse belongs, and therefore must be worn. The new blouses are so much a part of the suit itself, that one sometimes has to look a second time to be sure the costume is a blouse and skirt and not a one-piece frock. When they are of the over-blouse variety, the styling is subtly handled—the blouse coming down over the skirt band in form-fitting methods.

Blouses no longer blouse—they fit as snugly and smartly as a molded daytime or evening frock. There is no definite line of demarcation between blouse and skirt. Which not only makes for a much better appearance, but eliminates the obnoxious pulling down of blouse and hiking up of skirt, to which all suit-wearers seem heir when a suit is donned. This undoubtedly will be good news to the masculine population who, these many years, have expressed much concern over the way women are always nervously tucking in blouses when a suit is worn.

Blouse Era Returns.

Blouses have become so style-conscious and molded this season, that the skirt and blouse era is again predicted; in fact, many of the one-piece frocks both spectator and dressy types, are fashioned of two materials to give a skirt and blouse effect. Lame and gorgeous brocades top a number of the Lyons velvet suits and while they are definitely blouses, the styling has been done with expert thought and execution. Trimming the satin and velvet blouses, are glittering buttons of jet or rhinestones and huge clips of sparkling real or simulated jewels. When the blouse is untrimmed and depends entirely upon manipulation of material for smart effect, pearls in three-strand choker style are added to the ensemble. The newest are copper, gunmetal, beige or bronze in color.

With one suit and two blouses you can go anywhere with fashion assurance this season. Below is a weskit of "Cham-o-ray," a new jersey weave of chamois color, strikingly accented by green scarf and zipper pockets. Hat, gloves, bag and shoes are black, matching the suit; grand for business or the football game. At right, a dress-up blouse of black cire satin, ornamented with prystal buttons.



TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Crying Baby.

Until the child can talk, identify objects, reach for things and make his wants known, crying is his universal language. The tones may vary as may the force and vociferousness. The old-time doctor listened attentively to the baby's cry. He recognized screams of fright, squalls of temper and howls of disappointment. All should be heeded except those which typify disposition. These latter exhibitions in older children are called tantrums, and butting the head against any and all objects is an extreme manifestation.

Crying spells are often the result of poor training, and no one is responsible but the indulgent parents. Spoiled babies learn to wail for what they want. If they get it a yell will be set up with every new demand. Observe the baby who stops screaming when taken up and carried about the room. It may seem heartless or cruel to allow him to cry out his temper, but it is the wisest procedure in the long run. A little lung exercise will do him no harm.

But persistent, fretful whining is a significant sign of hunger. The baby may not be receiving enough breast milk or the mother's milk may be deficient in nourishment, with the result that the baby's food requirements are but half satisfied. If gain is not regular and consistent, supplemental bottle feeding probably is needed, and when an adequate food ration is supplied this sort of thing will stop. Despite our improvements in methods of infant feeding, no artificial scheme can quite replace mother's milk, and many babies undergo a starvation period when weaned for the sake of convenience.

Again, the diet may not be properly balanced and there may be present an actual nutritional anemia characterized by whimpering. This is occasionally observed about the fifth month of life, and examination of the blood may show a decided drop in the red coloring matter. The administration of iron and cod liver oil will soon bring about a rise in hemoglobin with a disappearance of fretfulness.

Next in importance to hunger is the cry of colic. This means real pain, and any one of us would set up a loud protest if we suffered a proportionate amount of distress. It is loud and continuous, the face is flushed, and there is a ring of pallor (lack of color) about the mouth. The abdomen is usually distended and tight, and the legs are alternately drawn up and kicked out. Fists will be clenched and the arms waved. Ordinarily the feet and hands are cold. If nothing is done the youngster will finally expel gas either from the stomach or the lower bowel, and will then fall asleep from exhaustion. Swallowed air is a common cause. There are many remedies and grandmother will enumerate a goodly lot. Glycerine rectal suppositories may be used. Sometimes placing the child in an erect position will be followed by belching and relief.

A child with earache may waken suddenly in the night, screaming frantically, and the cry of pain is always persistent. If the baby has had a cold, a discharge from the nasal passages, or a sore throat, the eardrums should be examined for the presence of infection within the middle ear.

Crying associated with breath holding is generally temper and is more common between the first and third years of life. Nothing frightens the mother more than this "stunt," but yielding to the child's whims will aggravate the condition. If this situation occurs in very young babies, an organic cause should be thought of, and too little calcium in the diet should be suspected.

Every child should cry, and most mothers learn to interpret the infant's language. A reasonable amount may be regarded as exercise that will insure full expansion of the lungs. If the directions as to feeding are followed accurately, if the baby is well and gaining steadily, and if the stools are normal, the attention-demanding tears may be ignored. This is a prime essential in child training.

Mother Entitled to Know of Arrangements for Young Guests.

By Margaret Wallace.

CHILDREN'S parties and picnics are the order of the day just now in Washington. And these events like those of grownups are attended with their etiquette problems. Should mothers accompany their children? If not invited how should they arrange for their children to attend the events?

DEAR MISS WALLACE: "My daughter, 5 years old, received a note this morning written on children's party note paper inviting her to go to a picnic with a group of children her own age she has met while she played in the park. Of course, I never allow my small daughter to go anywhere without me or my maid in charge. One of the mothers of the little girls also invited informed me that the mother of the little girls who are giving the picnic party told her that she is limiting the number of little girls to six so that she will not have too many to look after. I do not think one woman can look after six small girls properly and that in time of emergency would certainly look after her own children first. I would like for my little girl to go to the picnic as the other children have told her about it and she talks about picnics all the time.

Do you think it would be proper for me to ask what arrangements are being made for the care of the children? Each child is to be called for at her home the invitation says."

Full Inquiry Permitted.

Yes, you should inquire into all arrangements for such a party before you let a 5-year-old girl go alone. Usually the mothers or some older person is invited to accompany each child at such affairs. Of course, this entails picnic luncheon or refreshments for the grownups as well as the children. Sometimes it is a good idea for the mother of the tiny hostess to invite several other mothers to help her. It would be good form to call up the mother of the little girl who is giving the picnic and find out just what arrangements are being made. If they do not meet with your approval you can say that your little girl is not used to going to such places alone and that you are sorry that she will have to regret the invitation.

Business Women Trying to Avoid 'Office Hip' Evil

New York, Aug. 13 (AP).—Business girls, with an eye to avoiding "office hips," are buying firmer foundation garments than they did last year, a corsetier said today.

Tea-rose still is women's favorite color for foundations, but some black satin corsets are selling for fall, and white is increasingly popular.

The girls' first question after testing a foundation garment's firmness, the corsetier said, is "does it slip?" Which indicates that they're a little tired of hearing about "the great American gesture."

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

SHE'S ONE of those ladies who drives her own car and drives it fast—but not too fast! Her clothes are young looking and so is she, and she wears them with a delightful grace and individuality.

Naturally we expected her home would have a lot of that same dashing gayety about it that she has. And it did.

In the first place we noticed that the room was quite carefully designed as a becoming background for her . . . whether that was intentional or instinctive we don't know. But it certainly was successful at being just that. She is generally to be seen in browns (the pixy shades as a rule), or in some shade of green which she wears beautifully.

Her living room sets off her browns and greens by having walls of lemon yellow and a carpet of henna color. The upholstery is partly in grays and partly in the bright flame colors . . . the draperies are in a brilliant flame hue.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Man Seeks Solution of Present-Giving Problem; Girl Asks, "Shall I Receive Male Callers in My Room?" Needy Woman Wants Work.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have a temporary position in the Government paying enough to support my wife and child but not much more. My wife and I both come from families who live comfortably. Our child is the first grandchild in either family and receives many presents from relatives. My wife and I also receive numerous contributions of food and household furnishings, as well as presents for birthdays, anniversaries and Christmas. There are 14 persons in our immediate families.

* * * *

My wife's family makes it a practice to give presents when any member of the family has a birthday or anniversary and at Christmas. I would like to use more of our money for educational purposes and to pay off debts. If I do not give my wife the money for presents, she takes it out of the housekeeping money and expects me to tide her over until another pay day. Would it be permissible to refuse a present with an apology and the explanation that we are unable to give any in return? What would you advise me to do?

PERPLEXED HUSBAND.

Reduce Your Gift List.

DEAR PERPLEXED HUSBAND: Since you have only a temporary job and are in debt, you should reduce your gift list to the lowest common denominator. Instead of giving presents on birthdays and anniversaries, send a greeting card or write a letter. At Christmas, if you can afford to give small presents to members of your immediate families, do so. If not, give them to your mother and father and your wife's mother and father. Send cards to other relatives. Do not return any presents with apologies or explanations. This would embarrass the giver. If you inaugurate the policy in your family of sending cards instead of presents, you will no doubt soon find many of your relatives following suit, and you will no longer be showered with presents on every occasion.

M. H.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Five years ago a bank here in Washington, where my husband and I had all our savings, failed. Later, when we could not meet our mortgage on our home, we lost it. It was worth at least $15,000 and went for a pittance. I placed my furniture in storage, we sent our only child to relatives and my husband and I walked the streets looking for employment. Finally, he applied for relief and was promised employment at a small salary.

* * * *

In the meantime, I obtained work in a woman's club as housekeeper and office assistant. The day my husband was to start work, he received word that he was not to be given his position because authorities learned that I had employment. The shock was so great he died a few hours later. He was a Mason, but had not been able to pay dues for three years, so no help came from that source. My daughter eventually obtained work in another city and is barely making ends meet. I have a number of debts.

* * * *

Another management is taking charge of the clubhouse where I have been employed, and I am leaving. I have been searching for other employment but have found nothing so far. I can do everything any club, apartment or hotel housekeeper can do. I can also do practical nursing and serve as a companion. I would like particularly to get my furniture out of storage and rent a house so that I could make a living out of renting rooms. I have enough to furnish eight rooms. It is worth nearly $3,000, and I am about to lose the whole of it because I cannot meet the storage bill. I would like to give this furniture as security to someone who might be interested in co-operating with me in obtaining a rooming house. I am sending my name and address in case you have any inquiries in my regard.

I. M. F.

Will Someone Help?

DEAR I. M. F.: While this column cannot assume the duties of an employment agency, I am printing your letter with the hope that some reader may be able to help you obtain employment. I shall be glad to give your name and address to any inquirer.

M. H.

Child's Food Must First Be Palatable

Undernourishment Amid Plenteous Menu Possible.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"THIS CHILD is under-nourished."

Mrs. Smith was puzzled when the doctor made this statement. Of course Willy was thin, but probably he was built that way. Certainly he ate enough. He ate nearly as much as a grown person—good filling food—just the same food his father ate. Often he had ice cream or had hot dogs between meals. He seemed so hungry.

Willy was eight.

Had anyone told Mrs. Smith that the food she served was not fit for a grown man, let alone a growing child, she would not have understood him. It was rich food, and there was plenty of it, generally fried. There was a great deal of meat and starch in the diet—potatoes, macaroni or rice—bulky, filling articles.

There are hundreds of children just like Willy starving in the midst of plenty. Their systems are clogged with rich, but unnourishing food until their appetites become diseased and capricious.

Meat, potatoes and fried food may be of the best quality, but they are not a suitable or adequate diet. Vegetables, salads and fruit would probably do more to nourish a child. Every meal should contain one green vegetable carefully cooked and varied. There should also be some raw food, either salad or fruit, at each meal.

To many women, cooking is not a congenial task and they skimp on time and labor every time they prepare food, allowing perhaps 10 minutes to get breakfast and lunch, half an hour for supper.

It is a nuisance to stand over the stove or at the sink for a couple of hours at regular times every day, but if a family is to be well fed with a balanced ration, at least two hours a day, and often more, must be given to cooking.

Cabbage Needs Trimming Aids For Good Taste

SOME foods need no extra preparation to make them universally popular. And while cabbage may fall into this classification for you, it is one of the foods that to a great majority of persons needs a little extra trimming before it will be acceptable.

Many women find that while plain cabbage salad, usually referred to as cole slaw, is not a popular dish in their homes, they can make it so by adding other ingredients that have already been proved acceptable by members of their family. These ingredients, of course, must blend with the cabbage, must make it more tempting by lessening its flavor.

A favorite combination salad includes diced pineapple and cut-up marshmallows blended together with a creamy mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing and served in lettuce cups. For this combination use ¼ cup marshmallows and ¼ cup diced pineapple to 2 cups of shredded cabbage.

Another popular cabbage salad may be made as follows: Use 4 cups shredded cabbage, 1 green pepper, diced, ½ cup chopped peanuts and moisten with mayonnaise. Serve on a background of green leaves.

Individual Meat Loaves for Picnic or Party

These little individual baked stuffed meat loaves surrounded by crisp green parsley and fresh tomato wedges are displayed in party attire, but they are equally attractive when served hot upon a picnic plate or sliced cold, spread with mustard or chili sauce, and tucked between two thin pieces of buttered rye or white bread.

Fresh Pork and Smoked Ham Basis of a New Meat Loaf

By Dorothea Duncan.

EVERY SEASON BRINGS forth a new version of the meat loaf. This isn't unusual as there are almost as many ways of varying this popular dish as there are days in the month. It is not only possible to vary the size and contour of a meat loaf, however, but the ingredients as well. No one knows, for example, when meat loaf is mentioned whether it will contain pork and veal, sausage and beef, or fresh pork and smoked ham. And the number of seasonings that can be employed in changing the flavor of a meat loaf are almost too numerous to mention.

D. DUNCAN.

The newest version fo the meat loaf, not only varies size and shape, but ingredients as well, and the result is a toothsome morsel that will win the instant approval of summer diners.

Equal amounts of fresh pork and smoked ham, ground separately, and then twice ground together to insure a fine, even texture, have been used as the meat combination for this loaf. Chopped onion and green pepper and catsup and Worcestershire sauce added with a restraining hand enhance the flavor of the meats and provide a stimulating effect upon the appetite. Bread crumbs and slightly beaten eggs add the proper "stick-to-a-tive" quality so desirable in a perfect meat loaf.

The ingredients after they have been mixed are not molded as usual into one large loaf. Instead the meat is divided into six equal portions. Each portion in turn is wrapped carefully around the oval surface of a shelled hard-cooked egg. Each individual meat loaf is ture is the last step in the success of these individual meat loaves.

These tiny loaves are so easy to prepare that they have become favorite picnic food, too. One Washington housewife pops them into the oven just one hour before the picnickers start out for their destination. When they emerge from the oven she loosens them from their separate containers, but leaves them in the pans, wraps them in heavy waxed paper, and then in layers of newspaper and places them on top of the picnic basket.

For sandwiches or cold plate the meat loaves may be baked the day before. After they have cooled place them in the refrigerator until time of serving. Then with a sharp knife cut each loaf into thin slices. For sandwiches spread each slice of meat loaf lightly with mustard or chili sauce. When then placed into a baking cup or muffin pan, which has been lined with a strip of bacon. Baking for one hour at a moderate tempera-served as part of a cold plate, mustard or chili sauce or catsup should be passed in individual containers.

Here is the complete recipe for individual stuffed meat loaves. Clip it for your recipe file, and try it soon, as it is destined to be a family favorite.

Individual Stuffed Meat Loaves.

(Ground together twice.)
2 eggs, slightly beaten.
½ cup dry bread crumbs.
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.
6 hard cooked eggs.
1 small onion, chopped.
¼ cup chopped green pepper.
1-3 cup catsup.
6 strips of bacon.
Salt and pepper to taste.

Combine all ingredients, except hard cooked eggs and bacon, and mix thoroughly. Divide the mixture into six equal portions, wrap one portion around each of the six hard cooked eggs (shells removed). Line baking cups or muffin pans with a strip of bacon and place one individual meat loaf in each. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F) for one hour. This amount serves six.

Gingerale Recipe Merits Mention

Although gingerale mint freeze submitted last week in The Post's contest for gingerale recipes did not win a prize it merits honorable mention. It was submitted by Mrs. Dell Gilbert Sale, 1346 Park road northwest.

To prepare the beverage, put 3 tablespoons pineapple mint sauce in a tall glass. Fill glass with ice-cold gingerale. Add crushed ice and top with frozen whipped cream.

Pineapple mint sauce is made by simmering 1 cup crushed pineapple, 1 cup sugar, green vegetable coloring to obtain desired color, three-quarters of a cup water and 6 drops peppermint oil for 10 minutes.

SCIENCE ADVISES AGAINST MEALS LOW IN NEEDED "BULK"

Reports ALL-BRAN Supplies This Dietary Adjunct

Scientific tests have shown that meals which miss the proper "bulk" tend to cause common constipation. This condition causes discomfort, and may lead to headaches, loss of appetite, even serious disease.

Avoid these faulty meals by adding Kellogg's ALL-BRAN to your menus. It supplies generous "bulk" in convenient form. This absorbs moisture, and gently exercises and cleanses the system. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and contains iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is often more effective than that found in fruits and vegetables as it does not break down within the body. Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. If not relieved this way, consult your doctor.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN may be served as a cereal with milk or cream. Sprinkle over soups, salads or other cereals. Or work into appetizing muffins, breads, waffles, etc. It adds a delicious nut-sweet flavor to your recipes.

NEWEST "NO-SCRUB" SOAP DISCOVERY
Soaks Out Dirt in 15 Minutes—Yet Safe For Colors, Hands!

● Now this utterly new kind of laundry soap puts an end to the washday slavery women have suffered so long. No more aching backs! No more unsightly "washboard hands!"

OXYDOL is the latest amazing soap discovery by the makers of gentle Ivory soap. Combining speed and safety in a way no siggle soap has ever done before, it does these 4 amazing things:

(1) Soaks out dirt in 15 minutes, without scrubbing or boiling. Even the "tough" spots come snowy white with a gentle rub. (2) Cuts washing time 25% to 40% in tub or machine. (3). Gets white clothes 4 to 5 shades whiter than other soaps, proved by scientific Tintometer tests. (4) Yet so safe that hands stay soft and lovely, and every washable color comes out sparkling, brilliant, fresh! Even sheer cotton prints, washed 100 consecutive times in OXYDOL suds, showed no perceptible sign of fading.

Women everywhere are discarding old-favorite soaps of every sort and switching to OXYDOL. To end the drudgery of washday. To have snowy white clothes.

OXYDOL is economical, too. Tests show that it will go one-third to one-half again as far as even the latest soap chips on the market. One package often does twice the work—gives twice the suds—lasts twice as long as less modern soaps. Get OXYDOL from your dealer today.

Loew's Capitol Observes Gala Day in History

Ace Screen and Stage Bill Presented by Renamed F Street Theater.

By Nelson B. Bell.

"PICCADILLY JIM." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the story by P. G. Wodehouse, adapted to the screen by Mr. Wodehouse, Robert Benchley, Charles Brackett and Edward Knopf, starring Robert Montgomery, with Frank Morgan, Madge Evans, Billie Burke, Eric Blore, Cora Witherspoon, Tommy Bupp, Aileen Pringle, Grant Mitchell, Robert Benchley, Ralph Forbes, E. E. Clive and Billy Bevan. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Previewed Tuesday, August 11.

Yesterday was a day of importance in the history of the theater, which henceforth will be known as Loew's Capitol.

BELL.

With all of the ceremonial pomp and circumstance that could be thrown about the assumption of the new name, Loew's Fox passed out of the local theatrical picture after nine years of honorable service in the purveyance of screen and stage entertainment.

Further to celebrate the epochal event, a picture of unexampled wit, movement and gayety was flashed upon the screen as the major feature for the week and on the stage was disclosed the fourth annual production of the "Going Native" revue, the yearly field day for resident talent.

"Piccadilly Jim," as has been observed here on a previous occasion, restores Robert Montgomery to the first flight of capable light comedians. It affords him precisely the sort of role that elevated him to stardom and once more enables him to be a debonair, flip and amusing young man-about-town. His role is that of the young caricaturist in the P. G. Wodehouse story, who brings catastrophe down upon his own romance and utter chagrin to the family of the girl with whom he has fallen in love at sight by making them the pivotal characters in a comic strip that sweeps into popularity on both sides of the Atlantic.

Combines Rare Elements.

There is not a great deal in the story that lends itself to recapitulation in a drab newspaper review. There is a great deal in it, however, that fascinates a spectator in the theater by the blitheness of the humor, the hilarious fun inherent in many of the situations and the skill of the players assigned to the principal roles.

Opposite the star, Madge Evans contributes one of her most ingratiating performances, as the girl who does not at all suspect the real identity of the young man she is permitting, litle by little, to supplant a handsome young lord in her affections. Frank Morgan is ideally cast as Jim's father, who continually appeals to his son for "fatherly" advice—one of Wodehouse's neat dramatic paradoxes, this—and Cora Witherspoon, Billie Burke, Grant Mitchell and Tommy Bupp are perfectly cast as the other members of Miss Evans' screen family. Ralph Forbes is an ideal jilted lover. There is a spontaneity and brilliance in everything these talented mimes do that lends the picture a gloss, a sustained sparkle and an air of distinction that few comedies ever contrive to encompass.

The picture has been staged, directed and photographed with a degree of artistic skill commensurate with its high rating as an example of bubbling humor turned to some valuable account before the cameras and microphones.

Revue Is Spectacular.

The "Going Native" revue, staged by Gene Ford and performed by a local cast runs a trifle more to spectacular effects than any of its predecessors. It still needs to acquire a little more velocity before it will realize the full measure of its potentialities for speedy fun.

This year's edition of the native pastiming runs largely to dancing and has in its cast a group of "hoofers" who need concede nothing to those appearing on the professional "big time." Pre-eminent among them are Walter Long, LaNelle Avery, Coke Homan and Johnny Barnes, whose individual and ensemble work stamps them with the promise of successful stage careers if they choose to pursue them.

Singing also plays an important part in the entertainment, which presents 17 well-routined program units. LaNelle Avery, Margaret Octerwald, "The Four Deacons," a colored male quartet; "The Four Bartenders" from the U. of Maryland, another vocal foursome; "The Sophisticates"—three feminine vocalists, a male trio and a guitar accompanist—score in "Sidewalk Cafe," and "Grand Uproar" combines grand opera and travesty in a dog-walking interpretation of the Sextet from "Lucia," during which the unschooled canine charges of the opera stars provide most of the comedy.

Chorus of Beauties.

Individual hits are scored by Gordon Hittenmark, as master of ceremonies and specialist on his own account; Robert Youmans, Capitol Theater usher, who turns out to be a crack xylophonist, and Frank B. Cook and Jeanne Christian. The chorus is an aggregation of real beauties who reflect high credit upon Ned McGurn, who staged the dances. Their "Study in Brilliants" is a colorful bit of beauty that would do credit to any man's stage.

All in all, "Going Native," in its fourth manifestation, keeps pace with its predecessors, surpassing some of them in certain respects and falling slightly short of them in others. Comedy may be said to be the conspicuous lack of the "book" of this edition.

Fox Movietone News and Mr. Lampkin's orchestra complete the bill.

"MEET NERO WOLFE." Columbia Pictures Almization of a story by Rex Stout, adapted to the screen by Howard J. Green, Bruce Manning and Joseph Anthony, starring Edward Arnold, with Lionel Stander, Joan Perry, Victor Jory, Nana Bryant, Dennie Moore, Russell Hardie, Walter Kingsford, John Qualen, Rita Cansino and Frank Conroy. Directed by Herbert Biberman. Previewed Monday, August 10.

Scornful of the devices of the conventional detective, this Mr. Nero Wolfe, expert deductionist and super-sleuth—provided the fee is sufficiently substantial—solves his problems in crime without ever leaving the simple comforts of his own apartment, where he takes homey delight in guzzling large quantities of beer and cultivating rare orchids.

To be sure, Mr. Wolfe keeps his "Man Friday" pretty fairly busy doing all of the outside "legwork," but despite the aptitude of Mr. Lionel Stander for doing the wrong thing in this thankless job, it is Edward Arnold, in the title role, who sends the culprits unfailingly to the chair—or at least to the nearest convenient police station.

The present stimulus to Mr. Wolfe's remarkable powers has its inception on the golf links, where a middle-aged gentleman falls over dead, apparently from a heart attack. Mr. Wolfe when apprised of the incident—and a $50,000 fee for discovery and proof of foul play—is sure it was murder. His conviction is strengthened when another victim of a similar attack is found dead in the street.

You Will Be Surprised.

And that is about all that may discreetly be revealed without completely dissipating the picture's suspense and the element of surprise for future audiences. The mystery of the killings is adroitly built up and virtually every member of the cast at one time or another is under suspicion with seemingly evidence enough to hang him. And then, as goes without saying, it doesn't end that way at all!

Edward Arnold was an especially happy selection for the role of the latest crime expert to join the company that already includes Charlie Chan, Perry Mason, Philo Vance and a few other criminologists of note. He fits the character perfectly—or vice versa—and gives a lusty performance of a role that is novel, robust and exciting. Lionel Stander, as Archie Goodwin, plays with a little more seriousness than usual, although many of the laughs with which the action is sprinkled emanate from his sage observations.

Victor Jory, Russell Hardie, whose diction is as fine as any actor's on the screen; Joan Perry, Walter Kingsford and Nana Bryant all contribute deft character studies to a play that is well out of the ruck of stereotyped conventionality.

Musical Acts Score.

The stage portion of the entertainment is headlined by Pappy, Zeb, Ezra and Elton, comprising a hill-billy quartet already familiar to Washington audiences from earlier appearances on the same rostrum. Their songs and rustic comedy were enthusiastically received by yesterday's first audience. Sharing topline acclaim was the team of Arren and Broderick in "Opera in the Rough," a hilarious burlesque of vocal music's highest flights. Miss Arren's grotesque singing and Mr. Broderick's expertness at the piano converted this amusing interval into the afternoon's one genuine showstopper.

The bill is opened by Parke and Clifford, foremost of the gymnastic hand-balancers, and the richly caparisoned Miss Audrey Sieber also introduced a quintet of adagio and acrobatic dancers whose contribution to the gayety of the occasion stopped a little this side of sheer inspiration.

The Paramount News and orchestral contributions under the baton of Freddie Clark further augmented a feature that furnishes the most interesting item on the program.

"TO MARY—WITH LOVE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Richard Sherman, adapted to the screen by Mr. Sherman and Howard Ellis Smith, co-starring Warner Baxter and Myrna Loy, with Ian Hunter, Claire Trevor, Jean Dixon, Paul Hurst, Franklin Pangborn, Tyler Brooke, Florence Lake, Ruth Clifford, Pat Somerset and Arthur Aylesworth. Directed by John Cromwell. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

If ever a picture had "big box-office" written all over it in big box-car letters it is "To Mary—With Love," which is filling the Palace this week with laughs and sniffles.

But "To Mary—With Love" is much more than just a picture inevitably destined to break box office records. It is one of the most human pictures that ever has come out of Hollywood. It manages to intertwine the history of the Nation with that of a young couple in a manner unstrained and convincing, and adding thereby immeasurably to the perspective of the story. It demonstrates anew that the best entertainment key to the people's hearts is that which combines laughter and tears.

Above all, the story is a history of the last ten years in terms of both big events and the little, foolish things that are ofter better remembered, and also the story of the married life of Mr. and Mrs. Everywoman. Lindberg comes back from Paris and Jock Wallace does a little cheating while Mrs. Wallace is away. The stock market bubbles and young folks dance the Charleston. Herbert Hoover proclaims that "prosperity is just around the corner" and Empress Eugenie hats make all women look too funny. Everyone who was 18 or over in 1925, will recapture the last ten years touchingly and amusingly in the picture's procession.

Suspense Is Sustained.

The essence of the picture centers in a man and his wife and their best friend, the latter in love with the wife, but a "right guy," for all that. So artfully is the suspense maintained that no critic should ever spoil it for a prospective audience by revealing how it all turns out.

Myrna Loy, we would say, is perfect in her role, except that "perfect" is too weak and cold a word. She is magnificent. And almost the same superlatives can be applied to Warner Baxter and Ian Hunter, who, respectively, play the husband and best friend. Mr. Hunter deserves an especially good hand for his honest and ingratiating playing of a very difficult part—one that might easily have become colorless in less skillful hands.

Less important parts are handled cleverly by Claire Trevor and Jean Dixon, while Florence Lake makes her "bit" as a salesgirl stand out like a star on a Christmas tree. Though not mentioned in the cast, we also caught a glimpse of the late and unique Tammany Young in an early scene.

Cromwell Directs Skillfully.

But to Director John Cromwell must go the chief credit of getting out a picture that is a real landmark in 1936 production and that comes like "manna in a strange land" after an overdose of "light summer entertainment." The unerring Cromwell hand is evident in many incredibly deft sequences—the family fight that follows the discovery of a strange vanity case in the bedroom after the wife's absence, and the husband's painful breaking of the news that all is not well with the expected baby, being two of the best.

In the words of 1925, "To Mary—With Love," is the berries, and, in the way we say it now, it's the tops.

Views of the war in Spain and of the Olympic games gave the newsreel splendid spot news value, while the Hambletonian Stakes was both exciting and a study in beautiful horse flesh.

Micky Mouse is beset both by the tricks of a practical joker and an enraged bull, the biggest and toughest you ever saw, but is rescued by his trusty flivver.

Plays Role of the Perfect Wife

In "To Mary—With Love," the sterling film play now occupying the screen at the Palace Theater, Myrna Loy, whose excellent likeness appears above, is cast in the role of a young matron whose marital experience probably epitomizes the conjugal career of the average woman—with certain inevitable qualifications. Warner Baxter is cast as the young husband, Jock Wallace, and Ian Keith as the ubiquitous "best friend," who salvages the Wallace domestic happiness at a considerable romantic sacrifice of his own. Well worth seeing.

RKO-Keith's

"MARY OF SCOTLAND." RKO-Radio picturization of the play by Maxwell Anderson, adapted to the screen by Dudley Nichols, co-starring Katharine Hepburn and Fredric March, supported by Florence Eldridge, Douglas Walton, John Carradine, Robert Barrat, Gavin Muir, Ian Keith, Moroni Olsen, William Stack, Ralph Forbes, Alan Mowbray, Frieda Inescort, Donald Crisp, David Torrence, Molly Lamont, Anita Colby, Lionel Pape, Mary Gordon, Monte Blue, Leonard Mudie, Brandon Hurst, Wilfred Lucas, Cyril McLaglen, Doris Lloyd, Robert Warwick, Murray Kinnell, Lawrence Grant, Ivan Simpson, Nigel de Brulier, Walter Byron, Wyndham Standing, Earle Foxe, Paul McAllister, Lionel Belmore, Gaston Glass and Neil Fitzgerald. Directed by John Ford. Reviewed Friday afternoon (second week) by W. A. Whitney.

Out of the Theater Guild production of the play by Maxwell Anderson, with a stellar cast headed by Washington's own Helen Hayes, Dudley Nichols has fabricated for Katharine Hepburn and RKO-Radio Pictures one of the finest films. While there may be certain comparisons drawn between the Misses Hayes and Hepburn, there can be no disagreement on the point that "Mary of Scotland" is Miss Hepburn's finest work before the cameras.

A notable picture for any time of the year—and especially so during the heat of summer—this quasi historical drama of the latter years of Mary, Queen of Scots, is one which followers of both stage and screen should see. With Frederic March as the Earl of Bothwell, and a distinguished supporting company, the work offers an epic reliving of one of the world's great antagonisms.

As further embellishment to the program, there is added this week the seventeenth issue of "The March of Time." While treating its three diversified subjects with the usual thoroughness, a new high for straightforwardness is set by the discussion of the world's most lonesome man, King Zog I of Albania. The clip describes the story of the tiny monarchy from its inception to its recent virtual annexation by Italy.

The story of automobile trailers, from the beginning by Engineer Arthur Sherman down to today, when some 300,000 are in active operation, is detailed, with comments of this modern means of living and the probable effects on the housing problem later.

One of the most searching descriptions ever included in a "Time" release is the current one on the ostensible cropper-planter peonage in the cotton belt.

Pathe News rounds out the bill.

Columbia

"SUZY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a novel by Herbert Gorman, with screen play by Dorothy Parker, Alan Campbell, Horace Jackson and Lenore Coffee, starring Jean Harlow and Franchot Tone, supported by Cary Grant, Lewis Stone, Benita Hume, Reginald Mason, Inez Courtney, Greta Meyer, David Clyde, Christian Rub, Una O'Conner, Charles Judels, Theodore Von Eltz and Stanley Morner. Music and lyrics by Walter Donaldson and Harold Adamson. Directed by George Fitzmaurice. Reviewed Friday afternoon (return engagement) by W. A. Whitney.

Life and love abroad during the early, hectic days of the World War again become the background for a dramatic potpourri of entertainment themes with Jean Harlow, Franchot Tone, Cary Grant and Benita Hume the principal characters around whom the plot is spun.

With engaging dialogue, commendable acting and plenty of action, on the ground and in the air, there is unfolded the story of an American chorus girl, stranded in London, who finds romance and marriage with a young engineer engaged in inventing an airplane stabilizer. He is seemingly murdered, and she thereupon marries a young French aviator, only to learn later that her husband is not really dead. How all this becomes untangled is better left to the spectator to discover for himself.

Benita Hume adds her talents as an ingratiating spy, and Lewis S. Stone is fine as Mr. Grant's father The others of the supporting cast are well chosen.

The supplementary program is headed by "Gypsy Revels," with Yasha Bunchuk leading his orchestra and choir through a series of Hungarian and Russian gypsy melodies, including "Song of Three Horses," "Dark Eyes" and Mr. Bunchuk's own "Sighing Sands," which he plays on the cello. A rather inane subject is "Just Another Murder," with Billy Gilbert and Vince Barnett doing the main work in what is alleged to be a comedy. An issue of the Metrotone News is included on the program.

Reading Welcomes Water After a Bathless Week

Reading, Pa., Aug. 14 (AP).—A week of "ginger ale shaves" and no baths, that saw dirty dishes stacked high in kitchen sinks and housewives doing the family wash at 3 a. m., ended today as the city of Reading sent water through faucets in hundreds of homes in five suburban communities.

The water famine started when a court order closed a spring, principal source of supply of the Sinking Spring Water Co., because it was tainted with gasoline.

More than 5,000 persons exhausted every resource during the last week attempting to perform personal household cleaning chores. Hundreds of families were able to obtain water only from basement pipes, and then only in trickles, usually from 1 to 3 a. m., while others had no water at all.

Spanish Steamer at Sea Month Unable to Dock

Saint Nazaire, France, Aug. 14 (AP).—The Spanish liner Cristobal Colon, loaded with 344 passengers, but having no place to go, swung at anchor tonight in Saint Nazaire Harbor while the puzzled captain awaited a radio message from Madrid.

Capt. Edouard Sanos said he, the passengers and the crew had grown weary of the month's odyssey during which the ship crossed the Atlantic on its regular run from Vera Cruz, Mexico, and then wandered from port to port while the revolution raged in Spain.

Warned by a radio message that a rebel cruiser was lying in wait for his ship, the captain abandoned his plans to reach Barcelona and came to Saint Nazaire to await further orders.

13-Year-Old Girl Dies As Plane Runs Wild

Angouleme, France, Aug. 14 (AP).—Collette Loup, a 13-year-old girl, who took an airplane aloft for a fantastic solo flight without knowing how to land it, died of her injuries today.

Investigators thought the girl inadvertently had touched the controls after she had returned from a flight over the city with the plane's regular pilot and he had dismounted. It whipped off the ground and flew wildly for several minutes before crashing.

CHAPTER XVI

An Underworld Boss.

"In that folder Jack Garnett brought out here about New Mexico I saw pictures of the palm trees and flowers on those big cactus bushes—red and yellow." Clint wanted to give Gracie everything.

"The hibiscus and orange blossoms were so lovely in Florida——" She sighed, huddling in a small cold knot in the bed.

"You feel bad, hon?"

"No worse—just the kind of dragging pain in my back, and my throat feels raw."

"I'll get Mom's liniment and rub you. If we can just get away from here——" Clint gloomed into the mirror and he scraped his cheek.

"Even if we get away, how would we live? Even in New Mexico people have got to have money."

"Jack thinks he knows a fellow who would buy the car," hopefully.

"It wouldn't bring very much. And you'd have to paint it and change everything"

"I'm going to do that anyway. It'll bring something. And if we could sell the diamond——"

Gracie turned a ring on her fleshless finger. It gave off a gold glint from a square opalescent stone. Vick had bought that from a gambler in Atlantic City. It was all she had left of the flamboyant, terrible, beautiful nightmare of Vick. A dream that had begun so lyrically, and exploded so soon into pure agony, shame and poignant fear, ending in horror so numbing that she was still anesthetized by it, so that nothing could touch the depths in her ever again.

She could see Clint's face in the mirror, drawn, lean and taut. Clint loved her—and that was something, but it brought other fears. Old fears that she knew so well, of hag-ridden nights. He loved her and he wanted to save her, and he might try desperate means if the way was too cruelly blocked.

Already she knew that before he had appealed to Jack Garnett and the Faraday girl, Clint had gone to that other stony-eyed rule of frightened men, whose name was a shudder, so that Gracie never whispered it, even in her mind.

And this boss of the underworld, who had "squared Clint" once, before she married him, had only laughed at Clint's appeal.

"Go ahead and talk," he had said. "Talk your yellow guts out, if you think it will get you anything. You won't talk! Why? Because you'll burn if we do—any you know it. Now get out of here!"

"The heel!" Clint muttered through his teeth, remembering the humiliation, the lashing futility of that interview. That sneering sardonic mouth, those cruel eyes. "The ape! I'll learn him!"

"You'd better come along to bed." Gracie advised, wanly. "The house is getting like ice. You'll get that bronchitis again."

"Why should he come back? There's nothing more he can do."

"Well, he did something—he and that girl. If Burke listens to me——"

"Suppose he does listen? Suppose you tell your story? What then? They'll lock you up—they'd better—and you know what will happen to me!"

"You won't be here. You'll be safe—you'll be safe and warm before I pipe a word to Burke."

She sat up suddenly, her eyes wide. "So—that's it. You thought I'd do that—let you do that—save myself? You thought I'd be that cheap?"

Clint's eyes were desolate. He stumbled for words. It was not that he thought her cheap—a woman who would sell her man for her own safety—but that he had liked to think of himself as gallant, touched with nobility, eager for any sacrifice for this tormented girl that he loved.

"I'd get away—afterward——" he began awkwardly, "and you'd get well—and not have to worry any more——"

"You thought I'd go South—go anywhere—and leave you? You don't admire me very much, do you, Clint? You must have a pretty poor opinion of the wife you got."

"I've got such a good opinion of you that I'd let 'em boil me alive if it would get you out of this mess!" he cried. "My God, Gracie, I'm crazy about you! You ought to know that."

"Yes, I know it. Don't pay any attention to me, Clint. I'm just all to pieces——" She tensed suddenly and the color drained out of her face. "Clint—it's a car!"

Car Comes Up Lane.

Like a wraith a beam of light had moved across the mirror. A car, coming up the lane. Clint's eyes took on a look of stony caution as he picked up his coat, but he kept his voice to a casual level.

"It's probably Jack Garnett. You lie still."

But he knew better. The cars that Jack Garnett was able to borrow would never slip in haughty silence into the yard, with no sound but the closing of a door. He went swiftly down the stairs. His mother, with an old coat drawn over her outing nightdress, was admitting a tall man, who wore evening clothes under a smart overcoat. Every drop of blood in Clint's young body ebbed, but he stood quietly.

"Hello, Ozzie," he said.

The man before him looked at him with dry, inscrutable eyes under waxy lids. The eyes were the color of winter light, and there was a wintriness in the voice that answered, "Hello, Clint."

"Come along in," invited Clint tonelessly.

"Where's Gracie?"

"In bed—upstairs. She's sick."

Ozzie kept his hands laxly in his overcoat pockets. His hat was pulled well over his eyes. He had, Clint knew, come alone. It was part of the amazing power of this man, that he went about, fearlessly alone.

"Burke had that Faraday girl on the carpet this morning," Ozzie said.

"What did he bring her out here for?"

Clint's throat was dry, but calmly he repeated the speech he had rehearsed to himself so many times, lying sleeplessly at night.

"She wanted to see Gracie. All the cops and the boys down at the station—even the fellows on the morning papers thought Faraday was Gracie, see? And you know how women are—after a thrill."

"What's this Garnett want? What's he in this for anyway?"

"He don't want anything. He don't know anything. He's just a newspaperman. He knows Monk—and he went to school with Gracie."

Ozzie Zellner stood for a long minute without moving. Clint did not let his gaze falter. His veins ran liquid ice, but his knees held firm. Beyond the kitchen door he could see his mother's terrified eyes.

Then Ozzie shrugged. "You better go back to work."

"I was going back—in the morning," Clint said. "Monk sent me word to lay low—but it looks like everything has blown over now——"

"You go back to work. Nights."

"Nights?"

"You heard me. Tomorrow night."

"But—I got a sick wife, Ozzie——"

"I said nights."

Stiffly they faced each other. Ozzie's eyelids did not flicker. Clint swallowed.

"Okay."

He stood still while his mother let Zellner out, while the car purred away, but his mind was racing like a harried rat from corner to corner, desperately seeking a loophole.

Nights! Burke would have to help him now.

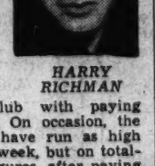
Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

Reviewing Stand

Mister Nick Blair is short, sharp-eyed, not thin and yet not fat . . . He looks to be about 35 years old, and he runs the Paradise, one of the bigger minimum charge cabarets of Broadway . . . In common with most cabaret entrepreneurs, Blair, for seasons past has been paying a lot of money to big-name performers, trusting to the drawing power of these names to fill his club with paying customers . . . On occasion, the gross receipts have run as high as $22,000 in a week, but on totaling up these figures, after paying off the big names, Blair found to his sorrow that the performers walked off with most of this money . . . For the last six months, Blair has ducked these big-name performers, assembled good shows with lower-priced performers, and has been making a handsome profit each week . . . "Never again will I hire big names," swears Blair solemnly.



HARRY RICHMAN

• • • •

"One week we did $19,000. After we paid off, we got for our own exactly $300. There's no percentage in that, and you mark my words, every club will eventually come to my viewpoint. I'm sick and tired of working for actors."

• • • •

Big-name policy of Broadway clubs always has been economically unsound . . . In the first place, once a club goes into this sort of policy it is forever hooked, because you must follow big names with other big names . . . It is a vicious cycle . . . Another thing, and not the least important—when a big-name performer enters a club, he or she will ruin the rest of the show . . . When Harry Richman worked at Ben Marden's Riviera, he deliberately played down after the act he introduced and deliberately shortened their applause . . . When Ben Bernie played the Paradise he did the same thing . . . Both of them were intent on selling themselves and they wanted no competition . . . As a result, they wrecked the shows which they should have "sold" to the public . . . Blair has come to that realization . . . Other cafe owners eventually will arrive at the same conclusion.

• • • •

Most successful supper club operators in New York have been John Perona, Sherman Billingsley and Jimmy Kelly . . . These three rarely have gone in for elaborate floor shows . . . Perona's only insistence is on a good American band and a good rhumba band . . . He has made a fortune, because the money he might have wasted on talent has been put back into food and liquor.

• • • •

Billingsley, patterning his Stork Club policy along the same lines, has been tremendously successful . . . Kelly, last of the big moneymakers in Greenwich Village, watches his show budget carefully, and weekly finishes in the black . . . The rest of them, engaged in ruinous competition for prestige performers, achieve artistic success and financial distress.

Hollywood

Watching Filming

Over at Paramount the musical is "The Big Broadcast of 1937." The words and music are by Leo Robin and Ralph Rainger and the cast includes Jack Benny, Burns and Allen, Leopold Stokowski and the latest vaudevillian to click on Broadway—Benny Fields.

ELEANOR POWELL

Broadway is now a big try-out theater for Hollywood. The movies seem to audition their plays and players there.

Benny Fields, tuxedo, high hat and cane, is standing in a night club set singing a ditty called "Night in Manhattan." He made good at the Hollywood Restaurant and now he's doing the same act here.

Fields sings, and sitting near Director Mitchell Leisen is Blossom Seeley. She is working harder watching her husband sing than Benny is doing the number. She beats out the rhythm with her feet. A glance from Director Leisen and she stops. "I did it every night at the Hollywood," Blossom says. "Benny can't sing unless I'm there rooting."

• • • •

And at Metro the big musical is "Born to Dance." The music and lyrics are by Cole Porter, latest of the big composers to write for pictures.

• • • •

There is a small building on which is tacked this sign: "Eleanor Powell Rehearsal Hall—Private." So I enter. A piano player is pounding out a Porter tune, and improvising steps is Miss Powell.

• • • •

"Mary of Scotland" was the first effort of that combination, Director John Ford and Writer Dudley Nichols, since their prize-winning flicker, "The Informer." Ford is a director who likes to work with the writer and know what is going into the scenario. Director Ford and Nichols discussed the script and outlined it while cruising on Ford's yacht. It was decided to discard Maxwell Anderson's blank verse, but to retain the characterizations and mood of Anderson's finely written play. Writer Nichols also learned that some of Anderson's speeches could be retained by merely adjusting them to the straight prose form.

John Ford is noted as a director who takes no guff from his players. Katharine Hepburn is temperamental, yet Ford and Hepburn never clashed. They like each other, and when the picture was completed they were great friends.

• • • •

The big casting problem was to find an actress to portray Queen Elizabeth. Judith Anderson and Helen Menken were among the many stage actresses tested for the role. Tallulah Bankhead was offered the role but didn't desire it. Bette Davis was wanted, but Warners refused to loan her—which is one of her peeves against Warners. Even Ginger Rogers donned a wig and made a screen test for the role of Elizabeth.

• • • •

The flicker had started shooting when Fredric March suggested Florence Eldridge, his frau. The other big problem was whether March should or shouldn't wear a mustache in the picture. He played his first scene with a mustache and without a mustache. Then, looking at the "Rushes," it was decided that March would be clean shaven in this flicker; it would be a good contrast to his role in "Road to Glory."

Legion Urges Wed Worker Clause Repeal

Election of New Heads Tonight Expected to Be Hotly Contested.

The District Department of the American Legion, in its eighteenth annual convention, last night urged Congress to repeal Section 213 of the economy act—that section which contains the clause forbidding husband and wife both to work in the Federal or District service.

The resolution said the so-called "marriage clause" worked "dire hardship" on families in the lower-income brackets.

Before acting on a batch of resolutions, the convention nominated officers for the next year. The election will come tonight, and is expected to be one of the closest in the legion's history.

O'Connell, Lineburg Nominated.

John H. O'Connell, of the Vincent B. Costello Post, and Lieut Horace W. Lineburg, of the Washington Police Post, were placed in nomination for department commander to succeed Joseph J Malloy, of Sergt. Jasper Post.

One or two votes may decide the election.

Another close fight is in prospect for national executive committeeman. Department Commander Malloy and Past Department Commander James O'Connor Roberts, of National Cathedral Post, are the nominees.

John D. Kiley, of Fort Stevens Post, and Ray L. Zwinglas, of the Stanley Church De Pue Post, were nominated for first vice commander; J. I. Bellow, of Treasury Post, and Helen Opitz, of Jacob Jones Post, for second vice commander; Henry A. Renz, jr., of Tank Corps Post, and Rolland W. Phillips, of Lincoln Post, for third vice commander, and Joseph Koehl, of Agriculture Post, and Paul J. McGahan, of National Press Club Post, for alternates to national executive committeemen.

Delegates Are Named.

Delegates and alternates to the Legion's national convention in Cleveland also were nominated.

William F. Franklin, member of the Costello Post, thought one worthy name had been overlooked in the nominations for alternates to the Cleveland convention, and he told the convention so.

"Whether you like it or not," said Comrade Franklin, "I place in nomination William F. Franklin."

In addition to its resolution urging repeal of the marriage clause, the convention adopted resolutions pledging a continuance of its fight against communism and all other "isms" inimical to the Government of the United States.

To Compile Document.

It approved the appointment of a legion committee to compile a document explaining communism, fascism, nazism and dictatorship.

It urged Congress to provide liberal pensions for widows and orphans of veterans who received a 30 per cent disability rating, but whose deaths might not be traced to war wounds.

It urged passage by Congress of the Starnes-Reynolds bill for deportation of certain classes of aliens, approved the creation of a Civil Service Court of Appeals and asked that a hospital be built in the Northeastern section of the United States for women war veterans.

Black Legion Denounced.

Love of Wife Jails Lottery Suspect

The wife, with Isaac Miller, 54, of the 1100 block Sixth street southwest, was arrested by members of the vice squad for allegedly operating a lottery. The husband went to headquarters after the raid to furnish bail for his wife. On his arrival, he was asked by Lieut. George Little, vice squad head, to "wait outside."

Vice squad members, shortly afterward, returned and told Little that all but a big man in the establishment had been arrested. The description fitted "Sol," who was called into the room. Placed with his wife and Williams in a line-up, he was identified as the escaped man by the police.

All three were arraigned before Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, pleaded not guilty and released in $1,500 bail for a hearing.

District Babies Vie in Contest At Playground

Mothers Bring Infants to Johnson-Powell Park for Competition.

Hot-weather days used to be called "dog days," but the Playground Department this year has turned them into "baby days."

At Johnson-Powell Playground yesterday 22 of the youngsters defied the blazing sun to decide who was the best all-around baby and who was the most popular.

Proud mothers were there with their offspring and older children who frequent the playground borrowed neighbors' infants to enter the contest.

The infants, all of them under 4 years old, were set upon tables while a playground physician decided who was best. He took health into consideration and disposition, too. The baby with the biggest smile had a good chance to win.

Then when a cheering audience of more than 100 had heard the doctor announce his decision, the popularity contest began. One by one each mother held her child aloft to receive the vote of the playground children. Their cheers decided the issue.

3 Virginians Seek $33,000 Damages In Dawson Crash

Thomas L. Dawson, Rockville attorney and former Secretary of State of Maryland, was sued for damages totaling $33,000 yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court. The suits arose from an automobile collision in which Dawson was involved on the Rockville pike, near Montrose, on April 26.

Mrs. Maggie Diehl, of Clarendon, Va., through Thomas H. Patterson, Washington attorney, asks $10,000 for injuries which she said had permanently disfigured her, and an additional claim of $10,000 against Dawson for allegedly driving under the influence of liquor.

Her husband, L. L. Diehl, asks $1,500 on each of two counts charging severe physical injuries and driving while under the influence of liquor. Chauncey J. Gentzler, also of Clarendon, Va., asks $5,000 each on charges of bruises and shock and driving under the influence of liquor.

The bill sets forth that on the evening of April 26 an automobile owned and operated by Dawson crashed into the Gentzler car, inflicting the physical injuries set forth in the suits.

In criminal proceedings after the accident Dawson was fined $5 and costs for reckless driving by Judge Harold C. Smith, in Rockville Police Court, and was acquitted on a charge of driving while under the influence of intoxicating liquor. At Dawson's request the reckless driving fine was increased by Judge Smith to $11 to permit him to file an appeal. He resigned as Secretary of State shortly after the accident.

Fowler to Test Arsenal Found In Killers' Car

Ballistics Findings Will Not Affect Harris' Case, Asserts Thompson.

A shotgun and two revolvers, believed used in the murder four years ago of Milton W. (Miltsie) Henry, Washington gambler, will be examined today by Lieut. John Fowler, police ballistics expert.

The arsenal was found several days ago in a secret compartment of an automobile used by Henry's killers near his home in Brown street northwest, in 1932.

The two pistols, Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson said, have been traced from the factory to a St Louis sporting goods dealer, from whom they were purchased.

Ammunition found in the car is of the same type, Thompson added, as that found on the scene at the time Henry was found slumped over the wheel of his car, his body riddled by shotgun slugs.

Every effort to trace the weapons' owners will be made, Thompson said, but the outcome will have no effect on Charles Harris' case, as he was convicted of murdering Henry without the use of the guns as evidence. Harris was arrested and convicted of the murder after he had been positively identified by witnesses as being in the vicinity at the time.

Several attempts to obtain the release of Harris have been made by civic leaders and clergymen after Harris continuously protested his innocence. He had been convicted of first degree murder, the conviction carrying a death sentence. The sentence was commuted to life imprisonment by President Roosevelt in 1935. Harris is now in the Lewisburg, Pa., Federal penitentiary.

Harry (Hoofsie) Davis, of Philadelphia, was named by Thompson yesterday as the other man in the case. Davis was killed two years ago in Baltimore when he and Claude Bailey, Tri-State gangster killed last year trying to escape Lorton reformatory, and Milton Scott, former convict, tried to "shakedown" Baltimore gamblers.

Amnesia Victim Is in Gallinger; Tried Suicide

Forgot Last Name After Celebration, 'Bill' Says When Held Here.

"Bill," who doesn't know his last name, was in Gallinger Hospital for observation last night after a night during which he attempted to jump from a window at Police Headquarters and asked a policeman for a gun as "the best way out."

Bill was arrested in Judiciary Square by Park Policeman A. S. Morau, who saw the man wandering about in an apparent daze, and took him to police headquarters for questioning.

According to the story he told police, Bill became involved in a crap game last Tuesday in Roanoke, Va., where he thinks he lives. He said his luck was good and, with some friends, he decided to come to Washington to celebrate.

The group registered at a local hotel and, supposedly, went about the business of celebrating. He left the hotel yesterday and "drew a blank," he said.

Police took his fingerprints and photograph and will send them to Roanoke. Bill is about 35 and neatly dressed. He thinks he is a mechanic.

Shuffle-Board Courts Built At D. C. Play Site by Parks Unit

Shuffle-board took its place with tennis, golf, baseball, archery and other sports played in Washington parks when two courts intended to attract followers of the shipboard game were opened downtown by National Parks officials.

The Capital's first shuffle-board courts—more will be built later if the demand is great enough—are located in the White Lot, opposite the Seventeenth street entrance of the Red Cross Building. Permits for their use must be obtained at Room 1046, Navy Building. Players are required to furnish their own shuffles and discs.

Originating in India hundreds of years ago, shuffle-board began to be played in England in the fifteenth century. Earlier names for the pastime were slidegrote and shovel-penny.

Parks officials also announced the opening yesterday of four new hard-surface tennis courts in Banneker recreation center.

D.C. Will Get Air Director To Aid Planes

U. S. Bureau to Insist That Private Pilots Conform to Rules.

Huge Map Will Denote Progress of Craft in Travels.

A traffic cop of the skyways will superintend airplane flying in Washington.

Starting today, the United States Bureau of Air Commerce will insist that private airplane pilots conform to the same regulations that have governed commercial transport planes for months.

From now on, when flying conditions are bad, the private pilot must report his speed, altitude, route and the type of his ship to the "air cop" at his point of destination.

If practicable, his flying plans will be allowed to remain unchanged. But if a collision appears possible, the "cop" may tell him to change his route or altitude or to stay on the ground.

Only in Bad Weather.

The average pilot who flies his own ship will have to obey these laws only in bad weather. If he wants to operate his plane with an automatic pilot the laws apply in all weather, but he must first pass a special examination and be equipped with two-way radio.

Commercial airlines started the air traffic cop idea in a voluntary safety movement last year. The first control tower was set up at Newark Airport, the air outlet for New York City. Another was placed at Chicago in April and last July 6, when the United States Bureau of Air Commerce took over the system, a third station was set up in Cleveland.

From Chicago yesterday the Associated Press reported that other controls will be added at Detroit, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Towers to Be Erected

At each point, several men equipped with radiophones, will control air traffic from a tower. They will have a big map of the control point's territory, with each air route outlined.

When a plane enters the territory, the radio office of the line to which it is attached reports its position, altitude and route. In the tower his position will be marked on the map with a small piece of wood.

Radio calls to the plane will be made at 15-minute intervals and the marker will be moved along the map at a rate corresponding to the plane's speed.

During bad weather, if several ships near an airport at the same time radio orders will be given for the one flying closest to the ground to come down first. The others will be told to circle until their turn comes. Under adverse conditions, ships must land one at a time.

Hike Is Arranged.

The party will meet at the Constitution avenue entrance to the New National Museum at 2:30 p. m.

Cops

Pigeon pilfering was discouraged yesterday by the law.

Park Policeman S. B. Collins, patrolling his beat in Lafayette Park, was amazed to encounter three boys in the middle teens calmly seizing tame pigeons and stuffing them into a pasteboard box. The captors, in turn, were grabbed by Collins. He discovered the box contained eight worried pigeons.

At the Third Precinct police station, boys and birds were liberated but only after the former had received a stern lecture.

"Both groups seemed relieved to go free," Collins said.

300-Pound Vendor Still Yells 'Ice Cream' Despite Arrest, Fine

Abe Milloff Pays $2 in Court and Wonders Why D. C. Authorities Don't Crusade Against Robbers; Park Force Raises Collateral Charge.

Abe Milloff, 300-pound dessert vender whose clarion "Ice cream! Ice cream!" reverberates daily on the park side of Fifteenth and E streets northwest, held jealously to his station yesterday while Park Police pushed their crusade against the ice cream brigade.

"I was pinched this week," he said. "It cost me $2. But I gotta do something and it don't seem to hurt nobody me being here."

So far this week Park Police have had nine such open-air merchandisers in Police Court on charges of violating the park regulation which forbids the selling of anything in parks without a special permit. In the last two weeks, 25 venders have fallen into the net.

Milloff was let off with a $2 collateral forfeiture when he was arrested Sunday. Since then, however, the police have raised the collateral to $5 and $10 in an effort to wipe out the ice cream salesmen who bloom each summer in East and West Potomac parks, the Smithsonian Grounds, the Ellipse and other parks where crowds are dense.

"Last year," said Milloff, "I got pinched 20 times in two days. It cost me $100. Why don't they let me alone and go after the ones who break into autos and steal things in the parks?"

6 Lodges Start Move to Recall A. F. G. E. Heads

Four on Executive Council Charged With 'Dictatorial' Tactics.

Six lodges of the American Federation of Government Employes yesterday initiated recall proceedings against four prominent members of the union's executive council.

Those whose recall is sought include Cecil E. Custer, national treasurer; Ira Y. Bain, G. Carroll Dimond and Michael D. Schaefer, vice presidents.

They were accused of "dictatorial abuse of office without regard to and in violation of the national constitution" of the A. F. G. E.

The latest recall effort has been welcomed by the executive council, Custer said yesterday, because it crystallized the "radical" issue which has been bothering the union for some time. He added that, with few exceptions, the lodges involved in the recall proceedings are counted among the "so-called radical element."

The lodges charged the council members with "withholding vital information" concerning the agreement reached with E. Claude Babcock, when recall proceedings were taken against him.

They further charged the council members named with suspending the Justice Department Lodge and the Panama Canal Lodge in "an unfair manner."

Battery

Someone became alarmed last night. As a result the Fire Department's downtown trucks were sent speeding through the streets toward the Commerce Building shortly before midnight.

What the firemen feared might be another Postoffice Building fire turned out to be a harmless storage battery alarm bell which had gone off to announce that the telephone company's batteries were overcharged.

Inertia Bars Subway Plan, Roberts Says

Complex D.C. Financing Also Blamed in Talk by People's Counsel.

Transportation System Inadequate, He Tells Local Club Group.

The "inertia and inactivity of District officials" and the "complicated financial mechanism under which District appropriations are devised" were blamed yesterday by People's Counsel William A. Roberts for blocking his subway plan for Washington.

Speaking before the Washington Round Table at the University Club, Roberts discussed mass transportation problems in the Capital and criticized the Capital Transit Co. for failing to provide adequate service.

Putting forth his subway proposal as one means of alleviating traffic congestion, he said:

"It can be demonstrated that the returns to the city in increased taxes on the 20 per cent increase in value of downtown commercial property alone would pay for the amortization cost and interest on such a subway system, and this would ignore entirely the tremendous expense in traffic control and street widening which the city must incur if the subway is not built."

Roberts said that "the dissatisfaction of the people of Washington with the mass transportation system is acute and vocal."

Denying that he was to blame for instigating the dissatisfaction, he added:

"The fact is that the street car transportation system in the District is inadequate today, and that for reasons which should be apparent it will remain inadequate.

"We are approaching saturation in the movement of passenger automobiles in the downtown streets due to parking facilities and inconvenience and danger of travel. The people must resort to mass transportation in increasing numbers and the system now projected is physically unable to carry any considerably larger number of people."

Milk Direct From Farm Asked for D.C. Agencies

Advancing a plan involving the pooling of purchasing power of child welfare agencies, hospitals and similar institutions to buy milk directly from the farmer, Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Consumers Council of Washington, yesterday made public a letter asking the District Commissioners to meet with the council to discuss plans for "removing children from the milk battlefield."

Referring to the council's fight on a 4-cent-a-gallon increase in the price, as proposed by Virginia milk producers, the letter, addressed to Melvin C. Hazen, District Commissioner, said the proposed plan would mean more money to the farmer for his milk, and that institutions would pay less.

Hume, Adams Collapse at Finish; ¼ Length Separates First 3.

Associated Press Sports Editor.

Grunau, Germany, Aug. 14.—Paced magnificently by the curly-haired invalid, Don Hume, who rowed the last 200 meters on the verge of collapse, Washington's huskies saved eight-oared Olympic supremacy for the United States under rain-soaked but highly dramatic circumstances today.

The Pacific Huskies were so exhausted in victory that two of the crew collapsed just beyond the finish. They were Don Hume, stroke, and Gordon Adams, No. 3, who were suffering from such heavy colds that it was feared last night they might not be able to row today.

Trailing by a length with only 600 meters to go, the unbeaten American collegians came from behind in a thrilling drive which carried them across the finish line scarcely a quarter length—exactly six-tenths of a second—in front of the heavyweight Italians.

Victory Is Dazzling One.

Germany's hard-fighting crew was a close third in a finish in which only one second separated the first three shells after the hardest kind of a battle over the 2,000-meter course through a driving rain and against a severe head wind.

The British and Hungarians, the European favorites, were beaten off, finishing fourth and fifth, while the Swiss brought up the rear in a race that saw the Americans barely outlast the battling blue shirts from Livorno, including three veterans of the crew that gave the University of California such a bad scare at Los Angeles four years ago.

Defying difficult conditions as well as sundry bronchial aches and pains, Washington had no chance to touch the Olympic record of 6:00.8 they set in winning their first test Wednesday, but their gold-medal performance, clocked in 6:25.4, was equally dazzling from the standpoint of oarsmanship.

Won on Guts.

They won, as head Coach Al Ulbrickson expressed it, "absolutely on their guts" during the throbbing finish, but they proved a world championshop boatload regardless of distance, rowing circumstances or the condition of their health.

It was the fifth consecutive eight-oared victory for American college crews since the war and ended a regatta marked otherwise by Germany's unprecedented achievement in capturing five successive finals, thereby rowing off with the team title for the first time in Olympic history.

Until the British doubles scullers came from behind in the sixth final Jack Beresford and Dick Southwood, to defeat the German representatives, there was nothing on the water capable of extending the powerful Teuton oarsmen who gave an amazing display in capturing the pairs and fours with and without coxswain in addition to furnishing the new sculling champion in Gustav Schaefer.

Once the Britons had broken the spell which the home-bred oarsmen had spun over the rain-drenched setting with a triumphant streak that aroused the wildest sort of popular demonstration by the

Mob Braves Rain To See Olympics

Berlin, Aug. 14 (AP).—Seventy billion buckets of rain soaked the Olympics today, but it was no use—the sports-mad mob simply wouldn't go home.

The main stadium was jammed and even the basketball and field hockey games drew big crowds.

Drenched but determined, spectators stood six deep outside the wire fence of the hockey stadium trying to get a glimpse of the fast and furious match between France and Holland. An hour before the India-Germany game for the championship, the stadium was full. The downpour increased, but the crowd wouldn't budge till, a few minutes before the opening time, the game was postponed until tomorrow.

One American Boxer Is Left In Finals

Wilson, Negro Bantam, Is Lone U. S. Victor as Laurie Is Beaten.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 14.—Jackie Wilson, Negro Cleveland bantamweight, qualified tonight for the finals of the Olympic boxing tournament by beating Ortiz, of Mexico, as Lou Laurie, of Cleveland, the other American survivor in the semi-finals, was eliminated from the fly-weight division by Matta, of Italy.

Though beaten, Laurie put up his best fight of the tournament, which was not good enough to take the Italian champion. Both fighters were extremely cagey and slow in starting at the beginning of the first round until Laurie jolted his opponent with a painful left jab on the eye.

From this point on, the American aimed at the puffy eye, and finally punched the flesh open in the final round. But while Laurie was trying to open the cut, Matta was cutting loose with long, hard punches and landing often. Twice in the second round he smashed the American against the ropes with blows to the head and midriff, and on his second round margin he won the fight.

They fought a furious third and final round about even and Matta was given a close decision.

Wilson's Win Is Booed.

Wilson's victory was unpopular with the crowd. Around 15,000 packed into Deutschland Hall for the night session, cheered and shouted whenever Ortiz hit the tall Cleveland Negro. Nevertheless, Wilson left no doubt as to the winner. He landed 18 straight left-hand punches in the first round before the Mexican got started.

Ortiz changed his style in the second round, crouching and swinging hard at the Negro's body. While the crowd shouted, "Hooray, Mexico, lick him!" Ortiz twice got Wilson in the corner and belabored him with wild punches, but the American smilingly blocked him off and shook him with stinging lefts.

Wilson loafed through the second round, however, and went into the last round with not too great an advantage. Then he settled down and carried the fight to the Mexican. Wilson repeatedly scored with perfectly timed uppercuts and kept using his left well, while Ortiz countered gamely, but ineffectively.

Under the cheers of the spectators, Ortiz climbed out of the ring protesting the decision, while booing greeted the announcement of Wilson's victory.

Featherweight — Casanova, Argentina, beat Fenyves, Hungary, and meets Catterall, South Africa, who beat Miner, Germany.

Middleweight—Despeaux, France, defeated Villareal, Argentina, and meets Tiller, Norway, who beat Chmielewski, Poland.

Light-heavyweight—Vost, Germany, won from Risiglioni, Argentina, and meets Michelot, France, who beat Liebbrandt, South Africa.

Heavyweight—Lovell, Argentina, defeated Nielsen, Norway, and meets Runge, Germany, who advanced to the finals when Nazy, of Hungary, his seminal opponent, was unable to fight because of injuries received in a former bout.

Budge Wins Over Parker in 4 Sets

Rye, N. Y., Aug 14 (U.P.).—Top-seeded Don Budge, of Oakland, Calif., advanced to the final round of the Eastern grass court tennis championship today after a hard-fought extra-set match with Frankie Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J.

Parker won the opening set and extended Budge all the way before going down to defeat by scores of 4—6, 7—5, 6—1, 8—6. Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., meets Bobby Riggs, of California, in the other semifinal tomorrow, the winner to meet Budge for the championship Sunday.

Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., upset second-seeded Mrs. John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, 6—4, 3—6, 6—0, in the women's semifinals. Tomorrow she faces Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, who gained the final by upsetting top-seeded Alice Marble, of California, yesterday.

America Assured Aquatic Team Crown Over the Japanese Stars.

Barring some unexpected development it seemed unlikely that Japan, their closest rival, could overtake them in the three remaining events to be decided tomorrow—200 meter breast stroke, 1,500-meter style and the 10-meter platform dive.

Pouring rain which left spectators half-drowned and pelted in his face failed to disturb Adolf Kiefer, of Chicago, as he swept to a record-smashing victory in the 100-meter backstroke over his teammate, Al Vande Weghe, of Paterson, N. J., and Masaji Kiyokawa, of Japan.

Marshall Wyne, of Miami, practically clinched the platform diving title when he led at the halfway stage with his favorite optional dives coming up tomorrow. The tall, blond-haired Floridan's only rival is the German, Erhardt Weiss, who was in second place 56-100ths of point behind.

Dutch Girls Score.

The only laurels that escaped the grasping hands from across the Atlantic went to Holland for a record-cracking triumph in the women's 400-meter relay freestyle championship. Even with Katherine Rawls, of Miami, drafted at the last minute and leading off the American girls could do no better than third behind Germany.

This exciting victory, in which the inevitable Rita Mastenbroek again played the leading role as she caught and passed Gisela Arendt, of Germany, 20 meters before the finish, gave the Dutch their third gold medal of the competition against two gained by the United States due to the talents of her divers. Miss Mastenbroek, who also won the 100-meter free style crown and was runner-up in the backstroke final, is favored to cop the 400-meter freestyle championship tomorrow.

On the men's side, America's grip on team honors was menaced by the Tokyo terrors, whose only chance to overtake the Americans is in the breaststroke and long freestyle pull. With only Johnny Higgins, of Providence, opposed to them they appeared to have the former event well in hand.

Medics Is Favored.

But they had a couple of young men named Jack Medica, of Seattle, and Ralph Flannagan, of Miami, to contend with in the distance race. Medica, in fact, looked like he intended to add the 1,500 crown to his 400-meter title as he stroked serenely to victory in his semifinal in faster time than Noburo Terada, of Japan, 19:42.8 to 19:48.6.

While Kiefer victory was all the sodden stands could have hoped for as a demonstration of back-stroking technique, it offered little in the way of thrills. It was evident since the first time the long-armed American entered the pool he would win as he pleased.

About the only kick the crowd got was the way Kiefer made the turn, his time-saving under-water somersault bringing a burst of cheering and gaining him at least a yard on Vande Weche and Kikokawa, who were close in the running up to that point.

Third Record in Two Days.

Kiefer's winning time, 1:05.9, marked the third straight time in two days he smashed George Kojac's 8-year-old Olympic record of 1:08.2 and splintered Vande Weghe's listed world record of 1:07.4. His first time out he was clocked in 1:06.9. Timers caught him in 1:06.8 in yesterday's semi-finals.

All in all, the Americans' showing in the dorsal-stroke event was the strongest they've made in the water. Vande Weche, taking second, was clocked in 1:07.7, while Taylor Rrysdale, of Detroit, fourth, was timed in 1:09.4. Japanese captured the other three places.

The girl relayers were the ones who provided the day's excitement. It was a three-team race all the way with Germany, United States and Holland alternating in the lead, Bernice Lapp, swimming the second leg, sent American hopes soaring when she touched the 200-meter mark slightly ahead of her two rivals, but Mavis Freeman and Olive McKean couldn't quite match their opponents' pace in the last half, slowly losing distance until it was a strictly German-Dutch duel the final 50 meters.

Dutch Team Wins.

The winning team was composed of Miss Selbach, Catherine Wagner, Willy Denouden and Miss Mastenbroek. The girls were clocked in 3:46 flat, two seconds under the mark made by the United States at Los Angeles four years ago. The Germans also shaded the mark, timed in 4:36.8. The Americans were clocked in 4:40.2.

The blond, statuesque Wayne, who has been the gallery's darling all week, whether performing or practicing, put his admirers in a sore predicament as he nosed out Weiss at the end of the series of four compulsory dives.

The Germans, who are intensely nationalistic, rent the skies when Weiss took the leadership in the first group. They became somewhat sullen when Wayne, who was in the second group, made his first two beautiful dives But when he executed a magnificent back somersault on his third dive and passed Weiss they decided it made no difference where he came from and stood up, giving him a full battery of cheers. There's less partisanship in diving than in any other department of the Olympic games.

Wayne came out of the competition with an aggregate of 46.65 points, against 46.09 for Weiss. Another Teuton, Hermann Stork, was

Portney Is Near Death After Furr Bout

Recovers From Ptomaine Poison; Was Stricken Before Fight.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 14.—Jack Portney was ill when he entered the ring against Phil Furr, of Washington, last Wednesday night and his condition became so serious after the bout two doctors were forced to work over him all night to save his life. The illness was diagnosed as ptomaine poisoning.

Because he was having no difficulty making weight for the bout at the welterweight limit, Portney ate some sea food a short while before he consumed the customary prefight steak.

Just prior to ring time he complained that he was not feeling well, but told his handlers he would get in the ring and "fight it off." As early as the fourth round he became so ill that his seconds feared the bout would have to be halted, but he insisted on continuing the fight and ultimately won a unanimous decision from the District welterweight champion.

After the fight he was removed to his home and physicians summoned to his bedside indicated that he had no better than an even chance of surviving.

Today Portney is well and he left by plane this afternoon for Detroit, where he was scheduled to fight Chuck Woods. He will not go through with the Woods fight because of a cut received on his nose in the Furr fight, but he wishes to show the injury to Michigan State commission doctors to prove that he is not able to fight as scheduled.

Red Grange Is Signed As Chicago Bear Coach

Chicago, Aug. 14 (AP).—Harold (Red) Grange, who retired from active competition two years ago to become an assistant coach of the Chicago Bears, of the National Professional Football League, signed a contract for 1936 in the same capacity with the club today.

It will be the tenth year in the league for the one-time Illinois "Galloping Ghost." In 247 games he played in high school, at Illinois and in the National League, the famous halfback carried the ball 4,013 times for an average of 8.4 yards.

Clarksburg Evens Play in Regional Tourney; 3d Tilt Today.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 14.—Clarksburg evened the series with Washington in the American Legion Junior Baseball Regional Play by winning, 10 to 1, here today after Washington won the opener, 2-0, on Thursday. The third and deciding game will be played tomorrow afternoon and the winner will represent the region in the Eastern finals at Charlotte, N. C., next week.

Jim Wright, local high school twirler, held Washington to five hits and runless except for one run in the seventh. Clarksburg's kids found their batting eyes against "Half-Pint" Alexander half way through the game and battered him and his successor, Jones, for 14 hits and ten runs.

Another pitching duel is in prospect tomorrow with Anderson, of Washington, facing Rokiskey, of Clarksburg, on the mound. Anderson won the first brush Thursday.

Miles Sent Back To Albany Club

DeShong, Ostermueller to Face Each Other Today.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 14.—Dee Miles, Nats' utility outfielder, was sent back to Albany today by Manager Bucky Harris. It is expected that he will be recalled late in the season.

It was Miles' second failure to hold a big league job. He was tried out this spring and granted a place on the squad. But when he failed to hit he was sent back to the minors in early July. Recalled two weeks ago and promised the rightfield post, he again failed to live up to his minor league hitting reputation, and was benched last week in favor of the veteran Carl Reynolds.

The Senators can bring him up to the big show only once more, according to baseball rules.

Jimmy DeShong gunning for his fourteenth victory of the year, will throw his might against the Red Sox here tomorrow when the Senators and Boston meet in the second game of their 4-game set. He will be opposed by Left-handed Fritz Ostermueller, a hard pitcher for Washington to beat.

Louis Has Lesson In Boxing Tactics

Pompton Lakes, N. J., Aug. 14 (AP).—Before only about a dozen newspapermen and no other spectators, Joe Louis, the former "Brown Bomber" took another boxing lesson today in preparation for his comeback bout against Jack Sharkey next Tuesday.

Louis sparred with Paul Cavalier while Trainer Jack Blackburn gave instructions. It was the third lesson this week in teaching Joe how to defend himself against left jabs and right crosses. After coaxing Louis through two lively rounds of shadow boxing, Blackburn sent his charge against Cavalier for six one-minute rounds, climbing in and out of the ring to illustrate his instructions.

Olympic Title Won by U. S. Five, 19-8

Philippines Win, 33-23, Over Uruguay Five for 5th Place.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Aug. 14.—The United States Basketball Team won the first Olympic championship today by defeating Canada, 19 to 8, on a court swept by wind and rain and deep in mud.

Mexico took third place by beating Poland, 26 to 12, and the Philippines took fifth by defeating Uruguay, 33 to 23.

America's team roared away to a 14-to-5 lead in the first half, but had neither the strength nor the need to do much thereafter. The Canadians' center, Art Chapman, scored the only field goal of the half for his side.

The Canadians tried to step up their offensive in the last half and did make some progress when Ian Allison, who replaced Jim Stewart at forward, connected with two long shots.

Mud Slows Game.

Joe Fortenberry, the tall American center from McPherson, Kans., who was the game's high scorer with eight points, contributed some good work on the defense, twice leaping up and catching balls headed for the net.

The Canadians relied on a zone defense to collar their taller opponents and succeeded well, considering the fact their players were obviously inferior. Art Chapman did particularly well in guarding Fortenberry, who usually is up aroud 20 points per game. Today, however, the game might have been better had it been played under water polo rules.

Today's finals were a sad ending to the event which brought together the world's best cagers. The general impression of the fans and players was that the 1940 Olympic tourney at Tokyo will find competition much tougher.

Macks Outslug Yankees by 10-5

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—The lowly Athletics gave the New York Yankees' murderers' row a lesson in heavy hitting today, smashing out 17 hits, including 3 homers, for a 10-to-5 victory.

While Buck Ross and Herman Fink were handcuffing the Yanks, the Athletics landed on Charley Ruffing and three other Yankee pitchers to pile up their score with clusters of three runs each in as many different innings, and a single tally in the fourth.

Bob Johnson and Frankie Hayes each belted homers with a mate on base. Al Niemiec poled the first homer of his big leave career into the stands with the bags clear.

Giants Blank Phils, 3-0; 2½ Games Behind Lead

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—Jim Ripple's big bat and Clyde Castleman's effective pitching gave the Giants a 3-to-0 victory over the Phillies today, to advance them to a slim two and a half games back of the league-leading Cardinals.

Ripple drove in two of the Giants' runs, one with a single in the fourth and another with a base hit in the sixth, and Castleman pitched nine-hit ball to give the Giants their fourth straight win and hand the Phillies their twelfth defeat in a row.

The only other Giant run came in the seventh, when Burgess Whitehead's long fly scored Joe Moore, who had tripled.

Claude Passeau and Syl Johnson pitched eight-hit ball between them, but failed in the pinches with men on base. Passeau was charged with the defeat.

Cubs Win, 7-5, Stay on Heels Of Cards

Reds Defeated Despite a Late Rally; Homer for Demaree.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 14.—The Chicago Cubs stayed on the heels of the league leading St. Louis Cardinals today by trimming Cincinnati's Reds, 7 to 5, in the first of a 4-game series.

Frank Demaree started the Cubs toward victory with a second inning home run, his fourteenth of the season. His teammates added two more in that stanza and the Cubs never were headed although the Reds threatened in the late innings.

Hits Home Run.

Catcher Ernie Lombardi gave the Reds a ninth inning consolation tally with his ninth home run.

Both the starting pitchers, Curt Davis for Chicago and Ray "Peaches" Davis, were hit soundly. Curt lasted less than four innings but "Peaches" retired in the third.

The defeat cost Cincinnati a chance to tighten its slim hold on fifth place since Boston's Bees, a game behind, lost to Brooklyn.

In the fifth inning the Reds got four walks and a single yet scored only one run. A double play in the midst of the walks cut down the chance for additional tallies.

Rivals Deuce In 27 of 35 Games

Burroughs Star Wins, 6–3, 4–6, 9–7; Nunez Gains Junior Crown.

Two young blonde giants, Harry March, of Burroughs Playground, and Gene Owens, of Mitchell Park, took the center court at Chevy Chase Playground yesterday to decide the senior tennis championship of the playgrounds. Two hours later they walked from the court, March the victor in a brilliant three-set match that probably has never been surpassed for sheer drama in the long history of the playgrounds.

Twenty-seven of the 35 games played, which found March winning by scores of 6—3, 4—6, 9—7, went to deuce. Five times in the last set Harry got to match point only to have Owens, the under-dog, stage unbelievable rallies that found the Western High net captain playing the best game of his life. It seemed impossible for Owens to make the "gets" he achieved in these crucial moments, but he always came up with his racket on the ball.

Match Brings Thrills.

From March's opening service in the first game until he clinched the match by winning three successive games in the third set, after trailing, 6—5, and 7—6, and seeing Owens get within two points of the title, these boys waged a battle that would put world series baseball or a heavyweight title fight to shame in the way of super-thrills.

Mike Nunez, of Montrose, and Jimmy Hardy, of Burroughs, put on a good brand of tennis following the March-Owens engagement as Nunez, the dark horse, who came apparently out of nowhere into the final rounds, won the junior title in three sets, 6—1, 2—6, 6—1. These youngsters had the misfortune to play at a time when almost any match would have proved an anti-climax.

The third set of the senior championship struggle found both March and Owens increase the tempo of their match from spectacular to really brilliant tennis. In this set 13 games went to deuce. Owens won his service to start the ball rolling. March quickly hit his stride maintained in the first set and went out to a 4—1 lead, however.

Owens' Placements Good.

Gene broke March's service in the sixth game, only to have the Burroughs player retaliate to put the count at 5—2. In the eighth game, on his own service, which was banging an inch inside the chalk lines with regularity, March got to match point at 40—15. He charged to the net seeking an opportunity to put the ball "away" only to have Owens pass him three times in succession with magnificent placements.

Given a breath of life when he appeared doomed, Owens quickly took the offensive and won four games in a row to lead at 6—5. The twelfth game went to deuce four times, but Gene, tiring now, could not get the advantage or match point and March finally won his service to tie up things again.

Later, Owens led again at 7—6, but was unable to reach match point a second time—this was one of the few games that did not go to deuce. With the count knotted at 7—7, March broke Owens' service, then won his own to end the exhausting battle.

Irving Hershowitz, 12 and Blind, Envisions Triumph in Swimathon at End of All-Day Drill

Youth Who Started Aquatic Career 5 Years Ago at Home in Water.

The well-constructed little 12-year-old gulped down the last drop of a cup of broth, which was fed to him as he treaded water, never touching the sides of the Airport Pool, flipped over in the water and started swimming furiously across the pool.

It was Irving Hershowitz, sightless since birth, in training for the swimathon which is to be held at the pool starting at 9 o'clock Monday night. Irving had been in the water for some six hours then—and was just getting warmed up.

Within arms' reach of the other side of the pool he flipped over again and came slithering back through the water.

"How do you feel?" someone asked as he got within hailing distance.

"Fine," he grinned back. "I feel so good I think I'll take a little swim."

One of the most remarkable swimmers about Washington, little Irving, who lives at 1220 Owen place northeast, started his aquatic career as a wader in the shallow end of the Airport Pool at least five years ago. Before long he was shoving off into deeper water and gradually he became a good swimmer.

Since then, Irving has practically lived in the pool in the summer time, and when the idea of a swimathon first was broached, he entered the contest immediately. Strangely enough, lately he has been able to distinguish between light and dark, and while not exactly certain that the exercise of swimming has helped in the partial restoration of his eyesight, he is hopeful.

Irving is accompanied to the pool every day by his mother, Mrs. Harry M. Hershowitz, who seems more than pleased at the progress made in this sport by her handicapped son.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Boston, Aug. 14.

Mr. Tom Yawkey, who has failed three years hand-running to bring Boston a pennant has succeeded notably, however, in spoiling the reputation of Boston fans as the fairest in the big leagues—at least the American League.

Within the past couple of seasons, Boston fans have taken to booing the efforts of home boys which was an unthinkable trend of events back in the days when the Red Sox were the door mats of the league and as such were being regularly scuffed upon by every club that visited Fenway Park.

But Boston fans were a charitable lot these days. There was no disappointment when the Red Sox lost a ball game or a series, because the Red Sox were the Red Sox and figured to lose. The booing of that era was directed only at the umpires, for which fans can always be pardoned.

POVICH.

And the visiting club always got a great break here. With the Red Sox absolutely bereft of stars, and never figuring as a pennant threat, Boston fans were lured to Fenway Park not so much by the Red Sox's possibilities but by presence of the big shots on the visiting teams. They came to see the talent and they were ready to applaud.

Consequently, whereas fans in other cities registered only disgust at a great bit of pitching or defensive play that stopped the home town boys in their tracks, Boston fans were quick on the applause trigger. They paid their money to see a big league ball game and considered a sensational play as their reward, no matter which team was the author of it.

Newcomers to the press box here watched with unbelieving eyes and heard with unbelieving ears the demonstrations of Hub fans as the enemy came up with a brilliant but nevertheless devastating double play. No where else in the circuit, with the possible exception of New York, would an enemy play have brought down the house.

But Boston fans have undergone a complete transformation. Mr. Yawkey, with his raids on the Philadelphia Athletics and his purchases of other stars, for two years now has had 'em whipped up to a pennant fever. He has led 'em on, encouraged 'em to expect a championship, and thus his Red Sox have forfeited their immunity to the rasberry. Boos have accompanied the disappointment at their failure and visiting clubs are finding Boston fans sour and vindictive.

With Boston fans now no longer people apart from the common herd, the best sportsmanship mantle now falls upon Yankee Stadium fans. As eager to applaud the Yankees as any home town crowd is to stand up and cheer for their favorites, New Yorkers, nevertheless, are quickly responsive to feats of derring-do by the opposition.

The characteristic of New York fans was never better qualified than in 1933 when the Nats and the Yankees were fighting for the pennant with the teams meeting at Yankee Stadium. Washington was leading by two runs and the Yankees were beginning to rally late in the game. Two were on base when Tony Lazzeri apparently drove in the tying runs with a long double.

But then followed perhaps the most famous play in modern baseball history. It was Luke Sewell's double putout at the plate on a relay from Goose Goslin and Joe Cronin. Both Lou Gehrig and Dixie Walker, racing home on Lazzeri's wallop, were tagged out by Sewell and the Yankee rally was choked off by the amazing turn of events.

But the tremendous holiday crowd even in its dismay at the double play that ruined the Yankees' hopes, actually stood up and cheered, not for a moment, but for five minutes, in appreciation of the Nats' great defensive work. In every other city in the league, that kind of a play by the enemy would have left the fans bewailing the results and demanding that the third-base coach be fired.

In Short—

Washington fans must be rated as the fair-weather type . . . applauding when the Nats win, booing sometime when they are taking a shellacking . . . and rarely cheering the opposition for a great play . . . Philadelphia fans, what there are of 'em, can vent greater anger at the home team than fans of any other city in the league . . . Cleveland gamegoers are red-hot home town folks who might boo the Indians in defeat, but who never send up a cheer for the opposition . . . Detroit fans, like Boston's, are spoiled, and resent defeat . . . until the ascendancy of the Tigers, the visiting team could always get a break from Detroit fans . . . Chicago fans are faithful to the White Sox in fits and starts, but when the Sox are going nowhere, as they usually are, they break down to the extent of applauding a particularly swell play by the opposition . . . for absolute devotion to the home boys, St. Louis fans, 500 of 'em, are tops . . . with the Browns behind, 12-0, in the ninth, all it takes to whoop 'em up is a base on balls.

Georgetown's Girls Victors In Meet

Score 80 Points to Win; Key Second; Anna Liegus Stars.

Georgetown Playground completely outclassed the field of 16 starters yesterday in the Western Conference Field and Track Meet for girls at the Western Stadium. The West-end lassies totaled 80 points, four times as many as the second place Key squad amassed.

Leaving out the runaway race staged by Georgetown, the meet was of great interest to the other 15 contestants who were closely bunched for second place honors during most of the meet. It was the largest of the conference meets held, incidently the final meet until the city championships on August 26.

Anna Liegus proved that she was in condition to shatter her own world's record in the basketball throw for distance when she tossed the sphere 98 feet, just four feet under her world's record performance. From now until the city finals she will concentrate on smashing her record.

Granville Liked For Travers Classic

White Cockade, Sun Teddy, Memory Book, Count Morse Also to Run.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 14.—The Travers, America's oldest horse race, will have its sixty-seventh running at Saratoga tomorrow with William Woodward's Granville opposing four other 3-year-olds, one of them a stablemate, in the mile and a quarter battle for $20,000.

Although his victory in the Kenner Stakes Tuesday was none too impressive, Granville is strictly the horse to beat. The son of Gallant Fox showed his mettle in winning the Belmont Stakes and Arlington Classic. Even in defeat this year he has not run a real bad race.

The Woodward colt, leading money-winning 3-year-old with $69,525 to his credit, will be opposed by Ogden Phipps' White Cockade which, like Granville, is trained by James Fitzsimmons; Sun Teddy, and Count Morse from Warren Wright's Calumet Farm, and Mrs. Payne Whitney's Memory Book.

The entry of Granville and White Cockade furnish an ideal combination. White Cockade, away from the races since beating Brevity in the Withers Mile at Belmont Park in May, has plenty of early speed, while Granville, himself no slow starter, specializes in strong finishes. Granville's only serious faul is that he likes to loaf when in front.

Also on the Saratoga card is the 6 furlongs of $6,000 spinaway, a race designed by 2-year-old fillies. The event has attracted 13 of the division's best.

Col. Greene Defeats Gallant Prince

Noses Apart In Suffolk Feature

Only 2 Figure in Four-Horse Race; Double Pays $1,784.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, Aug. 14.—In a finish as thrilling as the one in which he figured in Granville in the Withers against Mr. Bones, Jimmy Stout, sent here to ride Belair Stud's Gallant Prince, was forced to bow by a narrow lip to Weston W. Adams' Col. Greene in the mile and an eighth, feature of Suffolk Downs closing day program, before 20,000 patrons.

Only four horses went postward for the test, but the other two never figured as Stout and Glen Haines staged a stretch duel which took the photo finish to decide.

Gallant Prince, one-time workout mate for the mighty Omaha, shook off F. T. Blaisdell's One Chance in the run to the first turn and drew out by himself until Col. Greene came along under Haines making the curve for home.

Col. Greene caught up with Gallant Prince at the eighth pole and from there home the pair ran locked as one as the two jockeys went to whip, hand and heel. Col. Greene was caught in 1 minute 52 seconds for the journey, three full seconds back of the track record, and paid $9.40 to backers. One Chance came again in the stretch, but at a full neck away from the leaders, while four lengths back ran Harry Brown's Swamp Angel, which never was a factor.

In the previous race, Adams' Conservative also gained a foto finish decision over Windsor Farm Stable's Panther Creek, in a 5½-furlong dash for 2-year-olds.

DIRIGIBLE, moved into contention with a rush nearing the far turn, began working his way forwardly steadily the remainder of the way, wore down CLEAN SPORT to win going away. CLEAN SPORT, prominent all the way, assumed the command in the opening quarter-mile, withstood determined opposition from TEETER TOTTER, though unable to cope with the winner in the final test. GIFT OF ROSES, well placed all the way though racing wide and was unable to make up any ground under pressure. TEETER TOTTER, hard ridden in an effort to keep up with the pacemaker, faltered in the last three-sixteenths. MAHI closed some ground on the inside through the stretch run. DORNOCH closed some ground, but was much used in gaining a prominent position.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 2:57. Off at 2:59. Winner, S. Harahani's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ITSIE BITSIE, $8.80, $5.20, $3.80; CANFRA, $8.80, $5.20; SIT OUT, $4.60.

ITSIE BITSIE took command in the opening strides, drew clear before the turn into the backstretch was reached and, steadied along in front, held CANFRA safe, though ridden out sharply at the close. CANFRA, far back early, moved up on the inside and coming to the outside for the closing test finished with good energy. SIT OUT, restrained until leaving the backstretch, closed some ground. SUN CAMP closed ground. JOHN'S SON went well placed for the first five furlongs.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. The Lowell Evening Leader. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:31. Off at 3:32. Winner, Mrs. A. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROPHY, $34.40, $12.60, $8.80; BEDIGHT, $8.60, $6.20; CHARMED EYES, $12.80.

BROPHY, avoiding the fast early pace, moved up on the inside after leaving the far turn, responded gamely to punishment in the closing drive and was up in the last few strides. BEDIGHT displayed good speed, was much used in racing with CHARMED EYES and had nothing left with which to meet the winner's bid. Longden lodged a claim of foul, which was not allowed. CHARMED EYES forced the pace, though unable to keep up in the final drive. BRIGHT DON, slow to begin, closed an immense gap. INTEGRITY, a trailer early, closed with a belated bid. HASTINIP displayed good speed for the first half mile, faltering in the drive.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:01½. Winner, Leo J. Marks' ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MARMARA, $15.20, $6.20, $3.40; TUTTICURIO, $4.00, $2.60; LADDIE STONE, $2.40.

MARMARA, quickest to begin, was taken back of the pace, moved up on the outside, wore down LADDIE STONE when reaching the stretch and held TUTTICURIO safe at the end. TUTTICURIO, in nearest chase of the pace, came gamely at the end. O'Malley lodged a claim of foul, which was not allowed. LADDIE STONE opened up a good lead in the first quarter-mile, made game bid to go along with the leaders when challenged, but was not good enough. CARP was unable to reach the leaders. MISS PREMIER was never a threat. PRECURSOR dropped back immediately at the start, came and was devoid of speed the entire trip. He is capable of much better.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Wedgemere Farm Purse. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:33. Off at 4:37½. Winner, W. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONSERVATIVE, $5.80, $4.40, $3.00; PANTHER CREEK, $5.80, $3.40; QUEEN PULL, $2.60.

CONSERVATIVE was steadied along in back of the pace while racing on the outside, responded gamely to vigorous handling and was up in the final stride. PANTHER CREEK, well placed all the way, drew clear in the stretch and despite holding on gamely just failed to last. QUEEN PULL, slow to settled into her best stride, went into contention with a rush and closed with good energy though unable to reach the first two. LADY DAY made up some ground. COBE was unable to reach the leaders. ENFIN had early speed, then tired. ONE NIGHT displayed early speed, faltered after establishing a lead for almost the first half mile.

GALLANT PRINCE took command in the run to the first turn, drew clear and, steadied along in front, was placed under punishment leaving the backstretch, fought it out courageously and just failed to last. ONE CHANCE, steadied along back of the pace, closed going gamely through the stretch. SWAMP ANGEL was outrun throughout.

BULLFINCH, well placed, was unable to reach the leaders when called upon, though finishing with good energy.

Time Out!

"At times I wish I'd rescued my wife. At least she could play checkers."

with Bill Bennings.

Narragansett, Park, Aug. 14.

DEAR AL: Walter O'Hara's horse palace opens tomorrow and what a plant it is! Every modern feature and I can't help thinking of the Maryland tracks which still charge $1.50 admission to the $1 here. And Maryland offers peanut tracks compared to this one. Then again, O'Hara parks your cars. He has a parking lot for 10,000 cars and one does not have to wade through the dust or mud. His car is in a definite section and when he gets in it he can get out of the plant without waiting a half hour. Wide roads lead everywhere in contrast to the viaduct and bridge at Laurel, the rough narrow roads going into Bowie and the lone thoroughfare connecting Havre de Grace with the main road. This track has a photograph finish that is worthy of the name but O'Hara and company chose to call it the "Eye in the Sky." A field of 20 starters is predicted for tomorrow's feature race. If that is the case, a "walk-up start" will be used. Reports from the office say that the Benningites hopped on my offer of free Cumberland badges. If I can accommodate any more readers I will let you know. As ever,

BILL.

First race—Sylvia G. gets in with light weight and draws the outside post position from which she runs best. She will have her hands full downing Kent, but I believe it can be done. Keokee to take care of the others.

Second race—Bonanza has been a keen horse since returning to the races. Likes the sprint route and will have Hightshoe aboard. Kerry Patch and Galmica want more distance, but are dangerous here.

Third race—Lady Bewithus, a recent winner, seems well placed in this field. She will have Sun Fighter, a brisk worker, to beat. Baron Lynn, breaking off the rail, is a possibility.

Fourth race—Sand Baby is a consistent plater and one that seems headed for a set of brackets in this company. I'm depending on Jockey Knott for a good ride. Battling Girl, the lightweight of the party, will be a keen factor. Lady Carrot for the show.

Fifth race—Wise Prince gets the call in this bulky field, named for the day's feature. He has the rail post and the necessary speed to keep from getting shut off. Sation is dangerous despite that 132-pound assignment. Bachelor Dinner for the minor award. Clocker Mike likes Cycle.

Sixth race—Walter O'Hara may start the meeting with a winner. He has a strong hand in New Deal and Howard in this field and I'm going to string along. Roustabout and Bubblesome may be troublesome in the running.

Seventh race—Still Alarm is fit as hands can make him and ready to score in a field of this sort. Coming Back may need an off track but should go well. Whippercracker to take care of the others.

Eighth race—Kendal Green, in light, may surprise by taking the day's finale. Venetian has the stretch punch and is the one to beat. Ladogan has a chance.

Best bet—Lady Bewithus.

Wheat Tumbles As U. S. Supply Is Held Ample

Heavy Winnipeg Receipts Contribute to Fall in Prices.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—Huge rural deliveries of wheat at Winnipeg, together with next to no export buying, did much to tumble Chicago prices down 2 cents late today.

Contributing to wheat market weakness was an official announcement that total supplies of wheat in the United States for the 1936-37 season are large enough for usual domestic requirements. Winnipeg receipts of wheat today amounted to 1,722,000 bushels, whereas export purchases were only about 300,000 bushels.

Wheat closed unstable at almost the day's bottom figures, 1⅞-2 cents under yesterday's finish, Sept. 110¼-½; Dec. 110¼-⅝; May 108¾-⅞; corn ⅞-1⅛ off, Sept. 107⅛-¾, Dec. 94⅜-¾, May 91-91⅛, oats ⅝ to 1 cent down, Sept. 43⅛-⅜, and rye showing ¼-⅜ decline. The outcome in provisions ranged from 12 cents drop to 3 cents gain.

1,190,000 Gain In Telephones Since 1933 Low

40 Per Cent of Increase Made in First Half of This Year.

New York, Aug. 14.—Revenues of the telephone industry are responding emphatically to the quickening tempo of business and social activities, according to the Standard Statistics Co. today. Despite rate reductions and the still rising tax burden, earnings this year will closely approach those of 1931. The latter was by no means a poor year, as telephone company earnings did not fall away sharply until late in 1932.

Since the low for the depression—16,711,000 in 1933—the number of telephones in service has increased about 1,190,000, or slightly more than 7 per cent. Of this gain, approximately 475,000 new connections, representing nearly 40 per cent of the entire recovery, were made in the first half of the current year. Indications are that the aggregate number of telephones in the United States on July 1, was 17,900,000, or only 11.4 per cent below the peak of 20,201,000 in 1930.

Further progress along the upward curve of cyclical recovery in the United States should see telephones in service topping all previous records within the next two years.

Cotton Futures Drop $1 Per Bale

New York, Aug. 14 (AP).—A decline of around $1 a bale in cotton today was attributed to foreign and domestic selling in anticipation of increasing new crop receipts and the failure of bullish weather news to bring in more aggressive buying. December sold off to 11.79 and closed at 11.81 with the general market steady at net losses of 18 to 21 points.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was active today. After showing early gains of 3 to 10 points on further covering and commission house buying the market eased under increased liquidation influenced by the reaction in lard and the weakened technical position. Final prices were 3 points lower to 1 net higher. Sales, 204 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal: September closed 10.23; October, 10.15; December and January, 10.11; March, 10.12.

Stocks Weaker in Late Trading; Bonds Decline; Grain Prices Lower.

New York, Aug. 14.—After bumping along with irregular price changes until well into the afternoon, stock prices weakened and most of them were lower at the close. Turnover was just over a million shares, with the heaviest volume in the final hour. Bonds and commodities also felt the depression. September wheat closed 1¾ cents lower at 110¼ cents a bushel.

One of the developments in stocks which seemed to hearten the bears more than the bulls was the considerable rise in trading volume during a decline. That happened today in late afternoon, but the effect was more mental than anything else, for the selling soon lightened, but it was not followed by convincing buying. To some observers the operations looked to be largely professional.

At the poorest of the day the losses in leading stocks amounted to 1 to 3 points. Some of the more flighty numbers were down as far as 9 points. Rails gave ground easily and were among the first groups to be dislodged, as was the case yesterday. Declines of 1 to 4 points were reported for the rails, notwithstanding the weekly report of a gain of 25.2 per cent in car loadings last week over a year ago. The total was 2.6 per cent under loadings for the preceding week. The railroad group was rather heavy from the start.

Standard Advances.

Weakness was well spread throughout the list and the average loss was 1 to 2 points in the chemicals, steels and motors. Metals also weakened, but gave up less ground than some of the other departments. Some of the steel preferred stocks again reached new high prices. Other strong stocks were Ward Baking, Warren Brothers and May Department Stores. Standard Oil was good for a while, but it had difficulty in digging in. Some of the other oils gained a fraction.

Airplane shares were grounded, but they did not look particularly worse than some other groups, in spite of the unfavorable news on transport operations. Farm implement shares fared badly. Case broke 9 points. American Can ran into further selling and Continental sold down to the year's lowest. Follansbee Brothers (in receivership) lost a point, or 20 per cent, on the proposed reorganization plan.

Foreign exchanges and the money markets were unexciting. French currency continued to feel heavy and at times was below the gold point. Except for the movement of capital from France, which tends to lift sterling, the pound probably would be declining at this time. In the last several months the British import trade balance has been running higher, and this is the season for purchases or raw materials abroad, the effect of which usually is to weaken the sterling quotation.

Commercial Loans Rise.

Money markets were calm on the eve of the higher reserve requirements. This week excess reserves climbed $120,000,000, partly on Treasury cash disbursements and partly on a moderate gold importation. Member banks used $10,000,000 more of Federal Reserve credit, and in this district there was a small expansion in commercial loans, although brokers' loans declined a little.

Some of the big banks here have found an encouraging pickup in the demand for commercial loans. Most of them construe the development as seasonal and likely to be washed out in September and October when winter merchandise is disposed of, but it is significant that there has been no appreciable let down since early spring in credit demands. The August Federal Reserve bulletin contains figures for all member banks' miscellaneous and commercial borrowings as of June 30, which reveals expansion of $373,000,000 since March 4 and $327,000,000 since last December 31.

About $120,000,000 of the expansion since March was in New York City bank figures, while $164,000,000 was in other reserve cities, country banks expanding their commercial and miscellaneous credit by $90,000,000. This indicates that the increase has been evenly distributed throughout the country. The increase shown is the first important gain in the use of bank credit since the depression started.

Contraction.

It would appear that we have about reached that stage in industrial recovery at which bank loans begin to expand. Most of the improvement in business so far has resulted in the liquidation of debt, rather than in the making of new loans for widening business enterprise, a fact which incidentally has given a good deal of annoyance to the New Deal economists and brought down sharp criticism of bankers. The current bulge in the use of bank credit may be regarded as an indication that the first phase of return to prosperity has been covered.

Only the first corner nevertheless has been turned. Corporation profits in the first six months look healthy enough to insure a good credit standing at the banks of many concerns, but the trouble lies mainly in the unwillingness of business men to take chances on borrowing money at this time. Many of them still find enough uncertainties in the outlook (such as our volatile dollar, our unbalanced budget, taxes and the administration's attitude toward wheel turners and money changers) to make them wary of getting into the banks.

Spanish Situation.

The head of one stock exchange firm, according to the market letter, cables from southern France: "A prominent American newspaper correspondent who has just returned here from a trip to Spain reports that the situation there continues confused and indefinite."

Copper.

It looks as though the leading copper companies would shortly pull the lever again and put up the price of copper to ten cents a pound. That price is certain to come, it is said in the trade, and the only uncertainty is the date. For some reason the producer which usually agrees to make the first announcement seems to have held off this time, otherwise the higher price would have been put into effect a few days ago. In recent years the large copper producers haven't let their differences prevent them from presenting a united front to the market and following an agreed-upon course. Actual state of copper production, stocks and the like have not been mistaken for the horses; they have been labeled carts and kept to the rear of prices.

Advance.

Some observers, looking over the statistical field of world copper supply and demand, see no particular reason why it would not be possible (desirable is another matter) for an ample supply of copper to be produced without any uplift in price, but so long as the price does not cut down consumption, it at least aids the industry, or the more efficient producers. When several weeks ago the price was lifted from 9⅛ to 9¾ cents a pound, the usual day or two of grace was given consumers to come in and fill their requirements at the old price. Since then it is said buying has been quite small, and some members of the trade think that no price change should be made until more than a nominal market has been established at the present price. Betting at the moment seems to favor an early rise.

Inquiry Reveals $202,000 Loss Of Trust in Deal

By the Associated Press.

The Securities Commission investment trust investigation turned yesterday to a deal by which Chain and General Equities, Inc., a Boston trust, lost $202,000 on a purchase from its "sponsor."

David Schenker, commission counsel, asserted that Chain and General assets tobogganned from $8,000,000 in 1929 to a net market value of $2,000,000 in 1931.

He questioned Paul Childs, former Chain and General president, regarding a deal under which Schenker said the trust lost $202,000 in a $400,600 purchase of stock from Childs, Jeffersies & Thorndike, of Boston.

Schenker said that Childs, Jefferies and Thorndike, of which Childs was a member, organized Chain & General and asserted that in the stock transaction the trust was "dealing with its sponsors."

Childs agreed this was true, but added that Chain & General had purchased the stock voluntarily after being informed it was available.

The stock was in Chain Store Funds, Inc., another company organized by Childs, Jefferies and Thorndike.

Later Schenker called William Michels and E. B. Wariner, both of New York, former Chain & General directors, for questioning about an investment trust transaction through which the attorney said Wallace Groves, New York and Baltimore financier, made $360,000 in 1931.

Previous testimony had been that Groves acquired a block of stock in Interstate Equities, Inc., of New York, for $940,000, gained control of Chain and General and disposed of his Interstate holdings to the latter trust for $1,300,000.

Both Nichols and Wariner expressed the view that Chain and General paid a "fair price" for the stock, the former saying that if confronted with a similar offer again, he probably would take it.

Hearings were adjourned yesterday subject to call.

1. Find the apartment that meets your requirement—in the section in which you want to live.

2. Note the key letters and the number at the end of the ad. For example: D-5.

4. Then look for the numeral (in this case, 5) at either side of the map. Where the D and 5 meet is the vicinity in which the apartment is located.
